UN chief compares Lomborg to Hitler

21. april 2004 09:59 English

Earlier this week, he was named by Time magazine as one of the world's 100 most influential people, and now the controversial Director of the Environmental Assessment Institute in Denmark, Bjoern Lomborg, is being compared to Hitler.

The offensive comparison was made by the leader of the UN's Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change, Rajendra Pachauri.

Pachauri said that Lomborg's claim that the world cannot afford to save indigenous peoples like the Inuits from the consequences of global warming put him in line with Adolf Hitler.

"What is the difference between Lomborg's philosophy of man and Hitler's," asked Pachauri.

"Lomborg thinks of people in terms of numbers. He believes that it is cheaper to evacuate them than to fight global warming, and he has no respect for these peoples and their cultures. If one goes along with Lomborg's reasoning, then Hitler might have been on to something," Pachauri added.
