Case No. 8:06-cv-02193-SCB

FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION,
Plaintiff,

v.

SUNNY HEALTH NUTRITION
TECHNOLOGY & PRODUCTS, INC.
and SUNNY SIA;
Defendants.

STIPULATED ORDER

Defendants Sunny Sia and Sunny Health Nutrition Technology & Products, Inc.

("Defendants") have paid the Federal Trade Commission ("FTC") a total of $375,000, which was transferred from Defendant Sunny Sia's PayPal account (the "PayPal assets") pursuant to this Court's Order of December 15, 2006. Pursuant to Part IX of the Final Order ("Final Order") Defendants are HEREBY ORDERED to immediately direct the release of all funds currently held in the PayPal assets, not to exceed $1,525,000 dollars, with instructions to pay them to the FTC using an account number and instructions to be provided by the FTC.

In the event that the PayPal assets are insufficient to cover the entire $1,525,000 dollar payment, the Defendants are FURTHER ORDERED to pay the difference ("Deficiency Amount") to the FTC within three (3) business days after the FTC notifies Defendants' undersigned attorneys of the Deficiency Amount. The FTC may apply all funds collected pursuant to Part IX of the Final Order to all purposes permitted therein.

Full payment of $1.9 million pursuant to this Stipulated Order represents payment in full of all monetary obligations owing under Part IX of the Final Order, including all interest otherwise owing under Part IX(B) of the Final Order. Part IX(B) of the Final Order is hereby superseded by agreement of the parties to the extent stated in this paragraph. However, if payment of the Deficiency Amount is not made within the time specified in the preceding paragraph, then interest at the rate prescribed under 28 U.S.C. § 1961, as amended, shall immediately begin to accrue on the Deficiency Amount and shall continue to accrue until the Deficiency Amount is paid. All other provisions of the Final Order remain in full force and effect.

Upon receipt of the entire $1.9 million, together with any interest that may have accrued on the Deficiency Amount, FTC shall submit a motion and order to dismiss with prejudice its Motion for Entry of Suspended Judgment.

SO ORDERED this 22 day of Feb, 2007.
