Benefits...

History and Mission

The National Network of Libraries of Medicine (NN/LM) began in 1967 as the first comprehensive national library network. Under the leadership of the National Library of Medicine (NLM) and through the participation of medical libraries and other information centers throughout the United States, it has developed into an effective network for meeting the needs of the nation's health professionals, health information providers and the general public.

The University of Maryland has served as the Regional Medical Library since 1983.

Networking

NN/LM SE/A provides opportunities for collaboration with other librarians.

- ◆ Participation in the region's electronic mailing lists and subscription to the region's newsletter SEA Currents.

- ◆ Access to DOCLINE, an automated interlibrary loan requesting and routing system to find medical journal holdings at potential lending libraries.
- ◆ Participation in emergency preparedness, social networking and educational activities.

Training

NN/LM SE/A offers classes to improve health professionals', librarians', and the public's skills in accessing and evaluating health information.

- ◆ FREE of charge.
- ◆ At your site or online.
- ◆ Over 25 courses available.

Funding

NN/LM SE/A provides opportunities for project funding.

- ◆ Consumer access to electronic health information.
- ◆ Library computers, connections and training.

- ◆ Information access for underserved health professionals and consumers.

Technology

NN/LM SE/A assists network members in learning about and using the best information technology available by:

- ◆ Funding technology awareness fairs for health professionals or health consumers.
- ◆ Conducting Web access or technology related classes.
- ◆ Providing relevant technology news, electronic mailing list alerts, and articles in SEA Currents.
