1 [---> In addition to the dangers inherent in the final placement of nuclear waste only 90 miles from a 2-million-person-metropolis, the transportation of the nuclear waste material represents a handy target for a alien terrorist, but by any mentally unbalanced U.S. resident with a real or imagined grudge against the federal government, or even against any particular local government, establishment or person near the transport sites. Keeping the route and timing secret, considering the compexity of the task and number of people who would have to be involved in it, is ludicrous. All it would take is one crazy individual (or a herd of fanatics) and we would have nuclear distruction of a magnitude that would outnumber the 9/11 fatalities exponentially. Please don't give our enemies such an easy target.]
