1 [--> I do not have a real objection with Yucca Mountain. After all, that area of the state is already fairly contaminated with nuclear test shots and does not currently pose a health risk. However, I am VERY concerned with the TRANSPORT of the waste from other parts of the country and taking them right through Southern Nevada/Clark County/Las Vegas. If the DOE is willing to spend billions to get this place open and running, can't they spend a few hundred million more to open up bypass parkways/access roads and even railroad spurs? This could be a win-win situation, to provide more roads to ease interstate traffic as well as the ability to completely bypass Las Vegas.]
