Before I buy anything, I check the products label to see if it is Made in the U.S.A. - if it doesn't have that label I don't buy it! Now, after reading the USA Today article 5-8-97 about diluting the label, I won't be able to continue my guideline for purchasing USA made products. I am totally against changing the 50 year ~~standard~~ ^{standard} to anything less than what it has been. Don't change it simply because some greed-driven executive of a likewise big company wants you to. He knows as well as everyone else that with "our label" his foreign junk will sell.
