USA Policy Comment,

To whom it Concerns;

As an American, who in my 'str.' b.c. ofc. near 40 years, have seen many standards bent + torn, manipulated + ignored. This isn't what I want my country to be.

Shouldn't there be truth (full truth) in what is printed on our products? I think so. "Made in USA" makes me know what I'm getting. An lowering of the standard dilutes the definition of these words and deceives the consumer.

It figures that a company like WalMart, which wants to sell American made things with the emphasis that they are promoting American products, would want to bend the rules to further allow themselves to sell partly foreign made products. Products must compete as they are and earn the in paper label.

Let only those products which are made in the USA wear the ' ' label for we either never know what we are buying.

Sincerely.....
Philip Champion . . . "
