

If the product is 100% made in the USA then the label "made in the USA" should be used.

If not, is the consumer to guess what percent is made in the U.S. or elsewhere?

I believe companies have been fined for false labeling. If the product is not 100% made in the U.S. don't use the label at all, the consumer will know without the guess work, or think that the majority of the product was made in the U.S.

Hasn't the public endured enough lies in advertising?

Ruth V. Olson
 Tucson, Az.

Mrs. Ralph H. Olson
 12580 Calle Tango
 Tucson, AZ 85749