To whom it may concern:

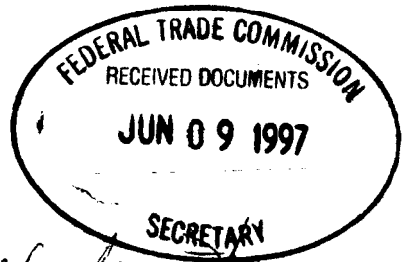

Concerning "Made in the USA" I do take this into account when purchasing anything.

Assembled, finished, painted, packaged or raw materials furnish by USA does not qualify for Made in the USA.

Essentially I fear that advertising endorsements and corporate cards originating in the USA, will inflate to the 75% level.

Speakers are made out of the USA sell for $100.00. How much of that cost is for the actual product. It has to be made in China and finish, polish, package and label in USA. However, this does not qualify for the honorable "Made in the USA".

Let us know who is taking home the money. In this way if I choose not to support a particular Country, cost-close or child labor. I will have the opportunity to make a valid and informed decision.

I think labels should include:

Components	=	0% Country of origin
Kit of Assembly	=	0% Country
Shipping & Administration	=	0% Country
		<hr/> 100% Total Product

Thank you.

Sincerely,

Alex Anderson
