Ms. McBride:

2/24/00

This is further to my faxes of January 10 and February 19.

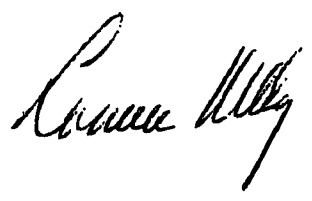

I'm now getting calls (2 this week) from "grave diggers" (better known as "memorial parks" or, by some, as "cemetaries").

While it's always nice to chat with a grave-digger, I'd prefer to have that choice -- that is, to have some knowledge, when the phone rings, that it's just another attempted commercial invasion of my home.

All to the point that I remain curious as to the FTC's position as to simply solving the invasion problem by earmarking the "telemarketing" invader with its own distinctive ring.
