REPORT ON MIKOYAN TALKS IN THE UNITED STATES

EXEMPT

29 Nov 63

On the subject of the conversation which MIKOYAN had with President JOHNSON, the Department told us that it does not yet have a record of the conversation. As far as our interlocutor knew the conversation was of a general nature. MIKOYAN, after expressing the sincere sorrow of the head of the Soviet Government and the entire Soviet population for the tragic death of President KENNEDY, expressed hope that relations between the two countries could continue to develop peacefully in conformity with the KENNEDY policy. President JOHNSON gave assurances that it is his firm intention to keep the preceding line of policy unaltered.

MIKOYAN then met with RUSK.

The conversation lasted about an hour. The Department told us that MIKOYAN began by repeating the ideas expressed to JOHNSON, and RUSK assured him that the change of Presidents did not mean a change in the foreign policy of the United States. In spite of the fact that the two countries have different positions on many international questions--RUSK continued--it is necessary to explore the area of common interests even if it is not possible to conclude formal agreements.

The conversation was then devoted to problems of disarmament, limitation of the arms race, and reduction of military expenditure. Particular importance was given to the question of nondisseminat of nuclear arms. On this last aspect MIKOYAN repeated the well-known Soviet thesis concerning the incompatibility between an agreement on nondissemination and the establishment of a NATO multilateral force.

Bilateral problems were then briefly mentioned and RUSK expressed hope that discussions on a consular agreement and negotiations on cultural exchange can be fruitful.

RUSK then concluded the talk by affirming that, on the broader international problems, the United States will discuss the Western position with its allies in December.
