ABOUT THE LIBRARY OF CONGRESS, PRESERVATION DIRECTORATE, CONSERVATION DIVISION

The Library of Congress, the nation's oldest federal cultural institution, is the world's preeminent reservoir of knowledge, providing unparalleled integrated resources to Congress and the American people. Founded in 1800, the Library seeks to further human understanding and wisdom by providing access to knowledge through its magnificent collections, which bring to bear the world's knowledge in almost all of the world's languages and America's private sector intellectual and cultural creativity in almost all formats. Many of the Library's rich resources and treasures may also be accessed through the Library's award-winning Web site www.loc.gov.

The Conservation Division ensures that the Library's universal collection of knowledge and creativity will still exist for future generations by providing treatment and preventive care for rare and valuable special research collections that are high priority, high risk, and needed for special uses (such as exhibitions, research, or digitization). The Conservation Division staff conduct and publish research; create new solutions to storage and care of collections; train staff, students, the public, and professionals; prevent and respond to disasters; prepare materials for moves, digitization, exhibitions, and loans; assess and evaluate new acquisitions and old accessions; monitor and plan storage spaces; and stabilize and treat threatened rare materials. A description of Conservation Division activities and ready-to-use guidance may be found at: www.loc.gov/preserv/conserv.html.

INTRODUCTION

Foundation Grants for Preservation in Libraries, Archives, and Museums lists 1,725 grants of $5,000 or more awarded by 474 foundations, from 2003 through the publication date of this guide. It covers grants to public, academic, research, school, and special libraries, and to archives and museums for activities related to conservation and preservation. Preservation grant funding described includes archives conservation, art conservation, collections management, computer systems development, disaster funding, education, electronic media and online services, endowments, environment, equipment, exhibit preservation and treatment, faculty and staff development, fellowships and internships, film and video preservation, global programs, governmental programs and needs, higher education, historical and archaeological preservation, historical societies, international exchanges, library preservation, museum preservation, painting conservation, performing arts preservation, photography preservation, program evaluations, publications, research, scholarship funds, science, social science, telecommunications, university, and visual arts conservation among others.

This Guide is derived from a grants database, which includes the grants from more than 1,100 of the largest foundations as well as sample grants from a wide range of small and medium-sized funders. Many of these foundations report their grants directly to the Foundation Center by way of grant reporting forms, electronic files, newsletters, annual reports, or other grants lists.

The grants listed in this publication are also included in the Foundation Directory Online, the Foundation Center's subscription-based service, along with detailed profiles of the foundations making the grants.

ARRANGEMENT

Within this volume, grants are arranged alphabetically by state, then by foundation name and recipient name within each foundation listing. Grant records include the following information: the name, city, and location (state or foreign country) of the recipient organization; the amount awarded; the fiscal year of grant authorization (or payment); and a description of the activity funded. Numeric references in the indexes are to grant identification numbers, not page numbers.

Access to the grants is available through three indexes:

- ◆ an index of recipient names;
- ◆ a geographic index (arranged by recipient state or foreign country location, then recipient name); and
- ◆ an index of subject key words.

The subject index contains a number of multiple index terms, such as film/video, that are indexed under the first word in the term, in this case, film. If you are using the online version of this publication, and you cannot find what you are looking for in the subject index, you can also search for your subject term using the “find in” search feature. Type the Control and F keys to open the “find in” search feature, then type any word(s), such as video.

Statistical tables analyzing the grants in this volume follow this introduction. These tables provide information on the dollar amount and number of grants according to the following breakdowns: foundation name; recipient state (or foreign country); primary subject; and recipient type. Additionally, a list of the top 15 grants by highest grant dollar amount and a list of the top 25 foundations awarding grants in this subject area are included with the statistics.

A list of foundation addresses and geographic limitations can be found at the back of this publication. If you are using the online version of this publication, you can also find the most up-to-date contact information by clicking on the foundation name link above each list of grants in Section One.

RESEARCH USING THIS GUIDE

In developing your basic list of potential funding sources, you should scan the grant listings in the category or categories closest to your field. Depending on the nature of your search, you will add to your list of possibilities the names of those foundations whose recent grants seem to indicate a potential interest in your organization or project. You should be looking for foundations that have funded an organization or project like yours, that are located or seem to award grants in your geographic area, and/or that have made grants in dollar amounts similar to the amount you are seeking.

If you are new to grantseeking research, we recommend that you visit the Get Started area of the Foundation Center's web site (foundationcenter.org). Continuously updated, the Foundation Center's web site is visited daily by tens of thousands of grantseekers, grantmakers, and others interested in the world of philanthropy. To gain an insight into the foundation world and the different types of foundations, review the Foundations Today Tutorial (foundationcenter.org/getstarted/training/online). For help in writing your proposals review the Center's Proposal Writing Short Course (foundationcenter.org/getstarted/tutorials/shortcourse) or alternatively, read the Foundation Center's Guide to Proposal Writing (foundationcenter.org/marketplace). Additional assistance may be found on the Conservation Online web site by searching "grants or funding" at: palimpsest.stanford.edu/gsearch-all-results.html.

PLEASE REMEMBER: IF YOU DO NOT QUALIFY, DO NOT APPLY.

Comprehensive research using all available resources will help the grantseeker determine the overall giving interests of a particular foundation and decide on appropriate foundations to apply to for funding. It is essential to remember that many foundations place limitations on their giving, including by subject area, recipient type, and geographic location. Finding out about any limitations before submitting grant proposals will save you time, decrease the number of rejections you receive, and demonstrate to the foundations you target that you know your field. The restrictions to giving under which some foundations operate appear in two places in this volume: in the "Grant Listings" section and in the "List of Foundations" section. If you do not fall within a funder's giving guidelines, do not apply for a grant. For all foundations, however, it is vitally important that you do further research before applying for funding.

After developing a list of foundations with a funding history in your field, it is imperative that you learn more about each one by consulting additional reference sources. If you are using the online version of this publication, you can start by clicking on the foundation name that is found at the beginning of each funder's list of grants. This link will take you to the funder's record in Foundation Finder (Inp.foundationcenter.org/finder.html), at the Foundation Center's web site. Here you will find the latest contact information, brief financial data, a link to the funder's web site (if available), and a link to the funder's latest IRS Forms 990-PF. For more information about a foundation, use the Foundation Center's Foundation Directory Online (fconline.fdncenter.org), FC Search: The Foundation Center's Database on CD-ROM, or the print Foundation Directory. To access the Center's free and subscription-based databases, go to the Find Funders area of the Center's web site (foundationcenter.org).

For additional information, expert librarian assistance is available at one of the Foundation Center's five Library/Learning Centers or more than 340 Cooperating Collections nationwide. Visitors enjoy free access to the Center's online databases, CD-ROMs, and directories—plus books, periodicals, and research findings on foundations and philanthropy. A list of Cooperating Collections is provided in this publication, or you can call (800) 424-9836 or visit foundationcenter.org/collections for the collection nearest you.

About the Foundation Center Established in 1956 and today supported by more than 600 foundations, the Foundation Center is the nation’s leading authority on organized philanthropy, connecting nonprofits and the grantmakers supporting them to tools they can use and information they can trust. The Center maintains the most comprehensive database on U.S. grantmakers and their grants and conducts research on trends in foundation growth and giving. We also operate education and outreach programs that help nonprofit organizations obtain the resources they need. Our web site receives more than 47,000 visits each day, and thousands of people are served in our five regional learning centers and through our national network of more than 325 Cooperating Collections. For more information, visit foundationcenter.org or call (212) 620-4230.

Interested in Becoming a Cooperating Collection? Cooperating Collections provide under-resourced and underserved populations across the U.S. with crucial information and education. To expand the network in regions where nonprofit communities are most in need of Foundation Center resources, we welcome proposals from qualified institutions—public, academic, or special libraries; community foundations; nonprofit resource centers; and other technical assistance providers—that can partner with us to help grantseekers succeed. If you are interested in establishing a Collection in your area or would like to learn more about the program, please visit foundationcenter.org/ collections or contact: Coordinator of Cooperating Collections, Foundation Center, 79 Fifth Avenue, New York, NY 10003 (e-mail: ccmail@foundationcenter.org).
