Comments: Good afternoon,

I am writing to you in support of continuously finding non-animal tests. After reading information from the New England Anti-Vivisection Society, it appears that much work is still needed to be done as similar European organizations have successfully discovered several testing alternatives.

It is imperative that changes are made in our country's labs. When there is no need for an animal, they should never be used. Animals can not be viewed as expendable tools. They represent lives lost when none should be losted at all.

Thank you for your hard work. I look forward to learn about the improvements you are making.

Sincerely,

Debra Gibson
