

Robinsue Frohboese, J.D., Ph.D.
Office for Civil Rights

Robinsue Frohboese, J.D., Ph.D. is the Principal Deputy Director of the Office for Civil Rights (OCR).As the Principal Deputy Director, Dr.Frohboese is the senior career official in OCR with responsibility for overseeing program operations and policy development. Prior to becoming OCR Principal Deputy, she was Deputy Chief of the Special Litigation Section in the Civil Rights Division of the U.S. Department of Justice.She has worked at the United States Senate Committee on Labor and Human Resources, where she was responsible for national issues involving health and human services. She also has worked with a number of national associations and task forces involved with health care and has published in the area of health policy and civil rights.Dr. Frohboese has a doctoral degree in psychology and a law degree from the University of Nebraska .