

Vaquita Expedition 2008

Developing acoustic monitoring for the world's most endangered marine mammal

A seminar presented by Dr. Barbara Taylor
Southwest Fisheries Science Center, NOAA
Fisheries

Monday, 26 January

11:00, Conference Room 14836

Mexico has invested over $18 million dollars to save this species. Vaquita Expedition 2008 brought an international team of scientists together to help Mexico better monitor this species using the latest acoustic technologies. Dr. Taylor relates the many successes of the Expedition and explains why there is new cause for optimism.