

2008 GENEALOGY FAIR

New Staff Publications

Periodically, staff publishes articles in order to expand research community awareness of the National Archives' holdings. By targeting state and local historical and genealogical societies with articles about the agency's holdings, we hope to reach people who otherwise would not think of the National Archives as a resource for their research. During the past few months, the staff has published the following:

Claire Prechtel-Kluszens (published):

"Cooperative Extension Service Annual Reports, 1900s–1940s" [Fairfax Genealogical Society Newsletter, Vol. 24, No. 2 (November 2008): 4–6]

"Extension Service Annual Reports" [NGS Magazine, Vol. 35, No. 1 (January–March 2009): 41–45]. Online at <http://mysite.verizon.net/ckluszens/NGSNews2009Jan.pdf>.

"Follow the Money: Tracking Revolutionary War Army Pension Payments" [Prologue: Quarterly of the National Archives and Records Administration, Vol. 40, No. 4 (Winter 2008): 46–57]. Online at www.archives.gov/publications/prologue/2008/winter/follow-money.html.

These articles are available through the Archives Library Information Center (ALIC) at the National Archives Building, Washington, DC. For more information, visit www.archives.gov/research/alic/.

(This event is free and open to the public. No reservations are required.)

Fifth Annual Genealogy Fair

WHEN: Two Days!

- Wednesday, April 22, 2009
9:30 a.m.–4:30 p.m.
- Thursday, April 23, 2009
9:30 a.m.–4:30 p.m.

WHAT: The National Archives will host its fifth annual Genealogy Fair. The fair showcases Federal records located at the National Archives and professional genealogy organizations' resources for doing research on family history; and will provide information and guidance for beginners, as well as experienced genealogy professionals. The winners of the National Archives Awards for Excellence in Genealogy will be announced during the fair. This event is free and open to the public in partnership with the Foundation for the National Archives and Ancestry.com.

Session topics include: Getting Started, Online Records and Databases, and Other Selected Topics. See the program at www.archives.gov/dc-metro/know-your-records/genealogy-fair/.

WHERE: Research Center Lobby and Pennsylvania Avenue Plaza (outside), National Archives Building, 700 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW, Washington, DC. Government-issued photo identification or student ID is required to enter the building. The closest Metrorail stop is the Archives/Navy Memorial station on the Yellow and Green lines. The National Archives is fully accessible. If you need to request an accommodation (e.g., sign language interpreter) for a public program, please e-mail reservations.nwe@nara.gov or call 202-357-5000 at least two weeks prior to the event to ensure that proper arrangements are available. For location details, see our Visitor's Map at www.archives.gov/nae/visit/archives-map.pdf.

WHO: Speakers and exhibitors include National Archives staff, historians, and professionals from the genealogy community, who are experts in records vital for genealogy research. See the listing of exhibitors at www.archives.gov/dc-metro/know-your-records/genealogy-fair/.

BACKGROUND: The National Archives holds the permanently valuable records of the Federal Government. These include records of interest to genealogists, such as pension files, census, and Freedmen's Bureau materials. For information on National Archives holdings, visit our web site at www.archives.gov.

For questions about the fair, e-mail KYR@nara.gov or call 202-357-5333.

Katherine Vollen

Katherine, a native of Kansas, began her National Archives career in 1996 as an archives technician in the Customer Service/Research Support unit.

She graduated from Boston University in 1992 with a B.A. in European history. In 1994, she obtained an M.A. in European history at Pittsburg State University in Pittsburg, KS. She earned a second M.A. in European history at George Washington University in 2000.

Katherine currently works as an archives specialist at the National Archives in Washington, DC. She specializes in Federal records of interest to genealogists and is often found answering reference inquiries and helping researchers in the research center, including the Microfilm Room and the Customer Service Center.

She often lectures on the subject of National Archives records as part of the Know Your Records program and to student groups. In May she will give presentations at the National Genealogical Society (NGS) Conference in Raleigh, NC.

Rebecca Sorrell Crawford

Rebecca was born and raised in Prince Georges County, MD. She began her National Archives career in March 2001 as an archives technician in the Customer Service/Research Support Branch at the National Archives Building, Washington, DC.

After 2 ½ years of pushing and pulling carts, she was promoted to her current position as archives specialist. Rebecca specializes in all things microfilm, and is responsible for overseeing the operation of the Microfilm Research Room in Washington, DC.

Not only does she ensure that the machines are running and the room is staffed, but she also trains new employees and volunteers to work with NARA's records, assists the public with their research (especially those questions genealogical in nature), presents lectures at NARA's annual Genealogy Fairs, writes articles for various publications, and is a participant in the Office of Records Services – Washington, DC's, Emerging Managers Program.

9/11 Commission Textual Records

On January 14, 2009, more than 150 cubic feet of textual records created by the 9/11 Commission were opened to public research. The records, which were accessioned by the National Archives following the Commission's closure in August 2004, comprise about 35 percent of the complete collection. The collection includes those documents that best reflect the scope and purpose of the independent, bipartisan Commission's investigations. Though materials created by the legislative branch are not subject to the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), the Commission stressed its desire to make the records as publicly available as possible by January 2009. Users can view the August 20, 2004, letter to then-Archivist of the United States John Carlin, in which the issue of accessibility is discussed, at www.archives.gov/legislative/research/9-11/letter-to-carlin.pdf.

Among the released records are interviews, office files, and background information on "the terrorists, past terrorist events, al Qaeda in general....[and] emergency responses to the attacks in New York City and Washington, DC." Due to the sensitive nature of the material, extensive screening has been undertaken to protect personal privacy and national security interests.

Further records will become available as they are processed by National Archives staff. So far, approximately 4,350 file units and 1,250 digitized items from the collection have been described in the online Archival Research Catalog (ARC).

Users may access these records via the Search Identifier: siLegislative 9/11 Commission, or through the 9/11 Commission Memoranda for the Record (MFRs) chart found at www.archives.gov/legislative/research/9-11/commission-memoranda.html. For more information, visit the Center for Legislative Archives' "9/11 Commission Records" page at www.archives.gov/legislative/research/9-11/.

For a list of all records available on ARC, please visit the main page at www.archives.gov/research/arc/.

Defense Casualty Analysis System and Combat Air Activities Files

by Lynn Goodsell

The National Archives' Access to Archival Databases \(AAD\) resource now includes two extract files from the series Defense Casualty Analysis System (DCAS) Files consisting of electronic casualty records of U.S. military personnel who died, were missing in action, or were prisoners of war in either the Korean War or Vietnam War as of April 29, 2008. The two files are the Korean War Extract Data File and the Vietnam Conflict Extract Data File.

The DCAS Korean War Extract Data File is the successor to the series Records of Military Personnel Who Died as a Result of Hostilities During the Korean War (also known as the Korean Conflict Casualty File) and represents the first update the National Archives has received for those records since transferred to us in 1980. New fields of information in the Korean War Extract Data File include religion, military occupation, and unit. The file also contains corrected or revised records and the addition of several thousand casualty records. This includes records for military personnel who died as a result of non-hostile circumstances.

Marines wait for pickup by planes of the U.S. Air Force, ca. December 1950

The DCAS Vietnam Conflict Extract Data File is the successor to the Combat Area Casualties Current File (CACCF) as of 1998. The Vietnam Conflict Extract Data File includes new fields such as unit, home of record county, and Vietnam Wall row and panel indicator. The file also contains corrected or revised records, along with a few additional records.

We have also added the Combat Air Activities Files (CACTA) to AAD. These records contain data about air combat missions flown during the Vietnam War from October 1965 to December 1970.

Both DCAS extract files, series of Korean War and Vietnam War casualty records, and the CACTA files are available online for searching and viewing at www.archives.gov/aad. More details about the records series and files are also available via AAD. Please contact the electronic records staff at cer@nara.gov with any questions about AAD.

For a list of all the records available on AAD and to search the records, please visit the AAD main page at www.archives.gov/aad.

National Archives and Footnote.com

Interactive WWII Collection Available

The National Archives and Footnote.com launched a new interactive online collection of World War II records from the holdings of the National Archives, including the first ever interactive version of the USS Arizona Memorial, WWII Hero Pages, and millions of WWII photos and documents previously unavailable on the Internet.

Researchers may access Footnote.com on Washington, DC, area public-access computers, located in our research rooms and libraries.

NOTE: See the Know Your Records lectures starting on page 11 for upcoming sessions by Footnote.com.

Footnote.com is a subscription web site that features searchable original documents, providing users with an unaltered view of the events, places, and people that shaped the American nation and the world. At Footnote.com, all are invited to come share, discuss, and collaborate on their discoveries with friends, family, and colleagues. For more information, visit www.footnote.com.

Know Your Records!

KYR@nara.gov

The Know Your Records program offers opportunities for staff, volunteers, and researchers to learn about NARA's records through lectures and genealogy programs, symposiums, the annual genealogy fair, editions of Researcher News, a genealogy tutorial, and From the Records Book Group discussions.

We publicize our offerings in NARA's Calendar of Events at www.archives.gov/calendar/ and on our home page at www.archives.gov/dc-metro/know-your-records/

Lectures describe records of the National Archives, explain how and where to locate the records, and demonstrate how to use the records for research. Each one-hour lecture is delivered twice within the same week—on Tuesdays at the National Archives Building at 700 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW, Washington, DC; and on Thursdays at the National Archives (Archives II), located at 8601 Adelphi Road, College Park, MD. Most of these sessions are videotaped and made available for interlibrary loan through NARA libraries and our regional facilities throughout the United States.

Genealogy programs include monthly workshops and lectures from our staff archivists with extensive experience in genealogy. We provide lectures on basic genealogical research and techniques and one-on-one assistance. Programs take place each month on the first Wednesday and select Saturdays at the National Archives Building.

Symposiums are one to two full-day programs on specific genealogy research topics. Past topics have included Hispanic and African American genealogy information and guidance for seasoned professionals and novices alike.

The 2009 From the Records Book Group will meet the third Tuesday of February, March, May, September, October (College Park location), and November. We meet at 11 a.m., in Room G-24, National Archives Building, Washington, DC, for a discussion or film relating to the book and then, at noon, to discuss the book. Enter on Pennsylvania Avenue. The books may be purchased anywhere; the Archives Shop offers a discount to those who are participating in the book group.

* College Park location: 8601 Adelphi Road, College Park, MD 20740-6001, Lecture Room B. Visit our web site for directions at www.archives.gov/dc-metro/college-park/index.html#transp.

Save the date!

April 22 & 23, 2009

The Fifth Annual Genealogy Fair will take place on April 22 & 23, 2009. The fair offers two full days of sessions, along with guidance on a wide variety of genealogy research topics with NARA staff, volunteers, and genealogy organizations.
