

U.S. Department of Labor Employment and Training Administration

Native American Employment and Training Program

Indians, Alaska Natives, and Native Hawaiians are eligible to receive employment and training services on reservations and in their communities under the Workforce Investment Act.

Services are targeted to assist unemployed, underemployed, or economically disadvantaged individuals with the goal of expanding their occupational, academic, and literacy skills and enhancing their job prospects. Programs also are intended to support economic and social development in Indian and Native American communities. Grants are provided to American Indian tribes, bands, or groups, recognized tribes in the State of Oklahoma, Alaska Native and Native Hawaiian entities, Indian-controlled nonprofit organizations, or consortia to provide these services at the local level. The Workforce Investment Act also authorizes funds to provide employment and training programs for Indian youth on reservations.

Programs are administered in a manner consistent with traditional cultural values, beliefs, and the ways of the people they are designed to serve. This initiative also reflects the unique legal, government-to-government relationship of the U.S. Government with the sovereign tribal governments, as set forth in the Constitution, treaties, statutes, and court decisions.
