General Intelligence Department Anti-Corruption Department

Background :

- In accordance with the royal decree and his majesty's mandate for the government to fight corruption in its various forms , the anti-corruption department was established during the middle of 1996 .

- Adopting precautions procedures , the department aimed to prevent corrupt activities from taking place, halt them when occur , and take the proper corrective procedures..

- One of the most important reasons for establishing ACD was the rapid economical development and the attempts to play an industrial and commercial role in the middle east . In addition , the governmental efforts and strategies to attract foreign investments and to form a legitimate and institutional governance was another effective reason .

- As a result of its attachment to the General Intelligence Department , which is characterized by its credibility and efficiency , the ACD plays a distinguished role by putting its information at the service of the decision maker.

Investigation and Prosecution :

In our efforts to persue a certain case of violation we usually act according to the following procedures :

- Firstly , we begin by receiving complaints and reports of corrupt activities , Other specific information about violations are collected by our officers . in addition ; being a part of the GID makes the information collected more intensive and accurate .
- Secondly , after collecting enough information about the case a process of evaluation and analyzation takes place , this process enables us to judge the credibility of the information.
- Thirdly. if the information is confirmed we begin to collect pieces of evidence by means of valid rules and regulations .
- Fourthly , after obtaining written permit from the prosecutor , a process of inspections and seizures take place to strengthen the evidences collected .
- As a last step , if the violation represents a case it would be sent to civil courts through the civil prosecutor . who is attached to the department from the ministry of justice.
- In cases where the violation committed can't be criminalized according to the law the department addresses the concerned entity in which the violation took place in order to take the proper sanction against the individuals involved.

The ACD's legal Reference :

To provide a legitimate and lawful aspect to the ACD's activities , a prosecutor from the ministry of Justice was permanently attached to the department in addition to a group of officers from the police department.

The Factors of the ACD's Success :-

undoubtedly, the department has played a significant role in combating corruption . which can be attributed to adopting the following principles :
