

There were 249,000 newly reported cases of occupational illness.

Service-providing industries accounted for approximately 53 percent of these cases, while goods-producing industries made up 47 percent.

Manufacturing and health care and social assistance accounted for nearly 61 percent of reported occupational illnesses in 2004.

Percent of nonfatal occupational illnesses, by selected industry sector, 2004

249.0 thousand total illness cases

Source: U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics, U.S. Department of Labor, November 2005