Case Summary:

- Valenzuela was charged in the Southern District of Florida on a multiple count indictment for transportation of hazardous containers onboard a commercial aircraft.
- Alleged violations include:
  - Hazardous Materials Transportation Safety Act
  - Making false statements
  - Conspiracy
- Valenzuela was a mechanic for SabreTech. He certified that all cabin oxygen generators had been properly removed and replaced on a ValuJet plane. Valenzuela caused these generators to be delivered and loaded on VALUJET flight 592 without proper markings, capping, packaging and other safety measures. The flight crashed into the Everglades shortly after take-off from Miami International Airport killing all 110 passengers and crew onboard.
- Valenzuela fled the country soon after his arraignment.
