

Telephone Consumer Protection Act (TCPA)

On June 17, 2008, the Federal Communications Commission amended Telephone Consumer Protection Act (TCPA) rules to require telemarketers to honor registrations on the national Do-Not-Call list indefinitely, so that registrations will no longer expire after five years. Under the revised rules, numbers will remain on the national do-not-call list unless the consumer removes his or her number or discontinues service. Consumers will no longer need to re-register their numbers on the national do-not-call list every five years.

<http://www.fcc.gov/cgb/consumerfacts/tcpa.pdf>

<http://www.fcc.gov/cgb/consumerfacts/truthaboutcellphones.pdf>