Directory of Foundation Workforce Grant Opportunities

A Guide for Faith-Based & Community Organizations

Purpose of this Grant Opportunity Guide<sup>1</sup>

Faith-based and community organizations (FBCOs) are essential partners in training and placing America's citizens in jobs. Nonprofit organizations, both community-based and faith-based, provide important services to hard-to-serve populations and often need assistance in locating and applying for diversified program funding.

The Directory of Workforce Grant Opportunities is designed to help FBCOs navigate different funding resources that may assist them providing workforce development and job-training services. This guide highlights funding resources that are available for FBCOs involved in workforce development, economic development, and employability training.

The first table details a list of companies and corporate foundations that provide workforce grants to faith-based and community organizations. The second table (beginning on page 29) details a list of private foundations that provide workforce grants, and the third table (beginning on page 45) is a collection of additional sources to assist FBCOs in locating workforce development funding and resources, both within government and within the private sector.

Please note that each foundation or organization may have their own application process and/or eligibility criteria to apply for funds. Although this directory is not exhaustive, this directory is aimed at assisting FBCOs as they seek additional support, both public and private, for their much needed programs in their local communities.

Annie E. Casey Foundation	Nationwide	The Annie E. Casey Foundation supports workforce development by awarding grants in the following areas: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>- Job Training: Job training is provided by a broad range of private and public employment and training programs. Training may be focused on teaching basic skills, upgraded skills, advanced skills, or computer skills, and it may be provided in a classroom setting or in an on-the-job program. The goal in all of these programs is to make sure employees, or prospective employees, are prepared to enter the workforce and to be successful in holding a good job.</li> <li>- Job Readiness: Being able to get and keep a good job requires a range of soft skills that are necessary to meet workplace expectations. These skills may include work behaviors, attitudes, the ability to get along with co-workers and supervisors, time management, maintaining a work schedule, and appropriate dress.</li> <li>- Placement, Retention, and Advancement: Family economic success is dependent on the stability and security that can come with a good job. Job placement and retention programs identify and develop work opportunities and match prospective employees with jobs. When working with hard-to-employ individuals, program staff assess real and perceived barriers to employment and develop strategies to address them.</li> <li>- Workforce Supports: Newly employed workers face challenges in keeping their jobs and balancing their personal and work responsibilities. Many low-income workers have very little in the way of family or economic resources to fall back on when confronted with unexpected problems. Support services can provide temporary assistance, information or guidance in dealing with transportation, child care, health care, or education and training.</li> </ul>	The Annie E. Blandin Foundation	Grand Rapids and other rural Minnesota communities	Blandin Foundation’s mission is to strengthen rural Minnesota communities, particularly its home area of Grand Rapids, Minnesota. Beginning in January 2003, the Foundation focused its grants on helping rural Minnesota communities identify and capitalize on their Community Economic Advantages. The Foundation seeks to invest—in partnership with other entities that have a stake in the viability of rural communities—in ideas that mobilize action around the economic assets that rural communities have to offer. Out of the grants awarded by the Foundation in 2003, nearly 70 percent were Community Economic Advantage grants that capitalize on assets such as: renewable energy, immigrant communities, health care innovations, broadband development, new markets for natural resource industries, collaboration of area stakeholders, private sector engagement in community economic development, housing, workforce development and innovations, technology industry development, business acceleration, access to business information, and capital mobilization. The Foundation’s grant activities are reviewed in three different geographic categories: grants for activities in the greater Grand Rapids area, community grants for a limited number of eligible rural towns in Minnesota, and statewide grants to support programs that have a broad rural impact. Charles Stewart Mott Foundation	Nationwide; particularly in Flint, Michigan	On a national scale, the Mott Foundation makes grants in the area of expanding economic opportunity. The goal of this area is to expand opportunity for those in, or at risk of, persistent poverty by promoting programs that increase income security and help people connect to the labor market. The Foundation seeks to increase employment among low-income people, especially parents, by supporting efforts that help them gain marketable skills, retain employment, and advance to better-paying, high-quality jobs. The Foundation also focuses its efforts specifically in the Flint, Michigan community. Of particular interest to the Foundation are issues of workforce development. This includes initiatives that seek to help low-income Flint residents overcome specific barriers to employment, such as: lack of education and technical skills; issues of attitude problems, substance abuse, and racial discrimination; and access to affordable child care, health care, and transportation. Additionally, the Foundation supports efforts that promote employment skills and training that result in career pathways for program participants.	Office of Proposal Entry            C.S. Community Foundation for Greater New Haven	New Haven, Connecticut area	The Community Foundation for Greater New Haven distributes grants in the New Haven, Connecticut community in the areas of health, education and youth, civic engagement and community development, regional and community economic development, and the arts. The Foundation's highest grant priorities are: 1) grants that support collaborative activities with other funders to which the Foundation has made a long-term commitment and 2) renewal grants, or grants that are part of a multi-year cycle of support provided to build the institutional capacity and enhance the contribution of key nonprofits in the community. Specifically, the Foundation focuses on developing the skills and resources of grassroots leaders in local New Haven neighborhoods. In particular, the Foundation trains neighborhood residents to design and implement plans to improve their housing, jobs, safety, environment, and recreational and cultural opportunities. The Foundation also supports projects that help residents and nonprofit organizations identify and train their leaders and help those leaders gain access and credibility with those who have the resources to support constructive system changes.	The Community Foundation for Greater New Haven            70 Audubon Street            New Haven, CT 06510-9755  Phone: (203) 777-2386  Fax: (203) 787-6584  E-mail: contactus@cfgnh.org  Web site: http://www.cfgnh.org/page10000271.cfm
Ewing Marion Kauffman Foundation	Nationwide; particularly in the Kansas City, Kansas area	The Kauffman Foundation makes grants and supports initiatives in entrepreneurship and education. The Foundation's grantmaking framework includes idea grants to get innovation moving, seed grants to pilot and test good ideas, and scale grants to refine and bring good programs up to scale. The Foundation makes sustaining grants to programs only as needed and watches for programs that can, over time, become self-sufficient. The Foundation only funds programs within the United States. The majority of its education grants go to organizations within the Kansas City metropolitan area.
