VIPs are Very Important People

Volunteering is an American tradition that has made an immeasurable contribution to communities, organizations, and individuals throughout the country. Today's volunteers are active, dynamic, creative individuals who possess the skills, desire, patience, and time to accomplish a wide variety of tasks.

Volunteers-In-Parks are Very Important People (VIPs). Each year thousands of volunteers donate millions hours working in national parks. Some VIPs work as individuals and other work as part of organized groups.

VIPs come from all over the world to help preserve and protect America's natural and cultural heritage for the enjoyment of this and future generations.

Morristown National Historical Park

During two critical winters of the Revolutionary War, 1777 and 1779 – 80, the countryside in and around Morristown, sheltered the main encampments of the American Continental Army and served as the headquarters of General George Washington. The National Park Service at Morristown National Historical Park preserves sites in the Morristown area occupied by the Continental Army and interprets the history and subsequent commemoration of these encampments and the extraordinary fortitude of the officers and enlisted men under Washington's leadership.

Combined, the museum, archival and library collection hold over 350,000 items. Spanning the 15th through the 20th centuries, the collection represents one of the finest and most carefully assembled resources in the area. Exhibits based on the park's holdings are designed to reflect this richness and incorporate the manifold stories of our themes.
