

The President's Faith-Based and Community Initiative in 50 States

A Report to the Nation's Governors

The White House

February 2008

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

February 25, 2008

Dear Governor:

Welcome to Washington, D.C., for the Winter Meeting of the National Governors Association. The NGA's 100th Anniversary highlights the important role Governors play in leading their States forward through innovative, results-driven initiatives. One such initiative taking root in all 50 States is the Faith-Based and Community Initiative (FBCI).

For the past 7 years, the FBCI has launched a determined attack on need, addressing society's most challenging social problems through the care and compassion offered by thousands of faith-based and grassroots organizations. Through the vision championed by President Bush, the FBCI has inspired Federal, State, and local governments to form partnerships with America's armies of compassion as never before. This collaborative effort has produced significant changes in the way social services are delivered, and with impressive results. Much of this success is due to the hard work of your State's faith-based and community groups and to the leadership your State has taken in implementing this nationwide effort.

Thirty-five Governors from both political parties have offices or liaisons dedicated to strengthening faith-based and community organizations and extending their vital work. Together, you are addressing some of the toughest problems we face, from addiction and dropout rates to homelessness and prisoner recidivism. Even in States without their own formal office, the FBCI is tackling stubborn problems every day. Such partnerships between the Federal Government and nonprofit groups result in more people being served in communities across each State.

The attached State-by-State guide book and accompanying report entitled, The Quiet Revolution, detail the remarkable progress and diversity of each State-led action. Specifically, you will see the number of awards won by your nonprofits, the funding they received, and some of the innovative programs they are helping to advance. And as you will read in Chapter 5 of The Quiet Revolution, there are many manifestations of this Initiative underway in the States.

I congratulate you on these accomplishments and pledge the Office of Faith-Based and Community Initiatives' continued support in helping you achieve new levels of success—whether forming a new office of faith-based and community initiatives, holding an annual conference, or launching a demonstration project to tackle your State's most stubborn problems. Through your leadership and the good work of your faith-based and community partners, these innovative partnerships will continue to grow in the years to come.

Sincerely,

Jay F. Hein
Director of the Office of Faith-Based and Community Initiatives
