HOLLYWOOD LEGEND AND HUMANITARIAN
AUDREY HEPBURN TO BE HONORED ON POSTAGE STAMP

WASHINGTON – It's no charade that the striking beauty whose elegance and grace made us dream of love in the afternoon, the romantic adventures of a Roman holiday and an intimate breakfast at Tiffany's will be honored by the U.S. Postal Service on a new commemorative stamp debuting June 11 in Los Angeles, Calif.

Ninth in the Legends of Hollywood series, the Audrey Hepburn stamp (image is attached to this message) will be dedicated at a first day of issue ceremony to take place at 11:00 a.m. in the auditorium of the Childrens Hospital Los Angeles Research Laboratory Building, Vermont Ave. and Sunset Blvd. The stamp will be available at the event and at Los Angeles post offices starting that day. It will be available at post offices nationwide beginning June 12.

“Audrey Hepburn’s achievements on the stage and screen alone make her a wonderful addition to our nation’s stamp program,” said S. David Fineman, Chairman of the Presidentially appointed Postal Service Board of Governors, who will dedicate the stamp. “But we also honor her for her work as an enthusiastic and dedicated advocate for the well being of children around the world.”

Scheduled to join Fineman at the first day ceremony are Sean Ferrer, son of Audrey Hepburn and chairman of the Audrey Hepburn Children’s Fund; Jennifer Love Hewitt, actress, singer and member of the fund’s advisory board; and Al Iniguez, Postal Service vice president, Pacific Area.

Hepburn was born in Brussels, Belgium, in 1929, the daughter of a Dutch baroness and her British husband. She spent much of her childhood in England, but in 1939 she moved with her mother to the Netherlands. After Germany invaded the Netherlands in May 1940, Hepburn and her family faced many hardships during the five-year Nazi occupation.

After World War II, Hepburn received a ballet scholarship in London. Following a series of modeling jobs, minor stage roles and small parts in movies, she was hired in 1951 for the title role in the Broadway play "Gigi." At the same time she was also hired for her first major Hollywood film role, playing a princess in "Roman Holiday" (1953), for which she won an Academy Award for best actress. In 1954 she received a Tony Award for her performance in the Broadway play "Ondine."

Hepburn subsequently received Academy Award nominations for her performances in four other films: "Sabrina" (1954), "The Nun's Story" (1959), "Breakfast at Tiffany's" (1961) and "Wait Until Dark" (1967). She often appeared onscreen with some of Hollywood's most distinguished leading men, including Humphrey Bogart in "Sabrina," Fred Astaire in "Funny Face" (1957), Cary Grant in "Charade" (1963) and Rex Harrison in "My Fair Lady" (1964).

In 1988 she became a goodwill ambassador for UNICEF, focusing her efforts on the plight of children around the world. She used her celebrity to bring attention to humanitarian causes by traveling throughout Africa, Asia, South America and Central America between 1988 and 1992, meeting with members of Congress and discussing her observations and experiences with the media.

In 1992 Hepburn was awarded the Presidential Medal of Freedom. In 1993 she received a Life Achievement Award from the Screen Actors Guild; that same year she was posthumously awarded the Jean Hersholt Humanitarian Award, an honorary Academy Award. She died at her home in Switzerland on Jan. 20, 1993, at the age of 63.

The Audrey Hepburn Children's Fund was founded in 1994 and later established the Audrey Hepburn CARES Team at Childrens Hospital Los Angeles, which provides medical and mental health services to suspected victims of child abuse.

Hepburn joins eight other honorees appearing on stamps in the Legends of Hollywood series: Marilyn Monroe (1995), James Dean (1996), Humphrey Bogart (1997), Alfred Hitchcock (1998), James Cagney (1999), Edward G. Robinson (2000), Lucille Ball (2001) and Cary Grant (2002).

The stamp art, a painting by Michael J. Deas, features a portrait of Hepburn based on a promotional photograph for the 1954 film "Sabrina." The selvage artwork, also by Deas, is a painting based on a promotional photograph for the 1961 film "Breakfast at Tiffany's." To see the Audrey Hepburn stamp, visit the Postal Service Web site and open the online version of this press release at www.usps.com/communications/news/stamps/welcome.htm.

Since 1775, the U.S. Postal Service has connected friends, families, neighbors and businesses by mail. It is an independent federal agency that visits 140 million homes and businesses every day and is the only service provider to deliver to every address in the nation. The Postal Service receives no taxpayer dollars for routine operations, but derives its operating revenues solely from the sale of postage, products and services. With annual revenues of more than $66 billion, it is the world's leading provider of mail and delivery services, offering some of the most affordable postage rates in the world. The Postal Service delivers more than 43 percent of the world's mail volume—some 203 billion letters, advertisements, periodicals and packages a year—and serves 7 million customers each day at its 38,000 retail locations nationwide.
