Fourth of July

Intro shot

Ping, Lu, Lloyd, Shannon, DeShawn, and Mr. and Mrs. Moore are walking through Rock Creek Park in the late afternoon enjoying the day before the fireworks display that night. There are displays and booths about the American Revolution set up in the park. These displays prompt the conversation and the family and friends are talking about the meaning of the Forth of July. Revolutionary War re-enactors are demonstrating camp life during the Revolution. Actors are dressed up as famous characters from the Revolutionary War.

Music up

Mrs. Moore	This is such a beautiful park. It is the oldest one in Washington, D. C. I love seeing the re-enactments.
Shannon	This is great, but tonight will be better. We will see the biggest fireworks display tonight. It is on the Mall. We need to catch a Metro train by 6:30 p.m. The Mall gets very crowded on the 4 th !
Ping	How long is the trip?
Mr. Moore	It depends on the trains. It can take from 15 minutes to 45 minutes.
DeShawn	We are going to see the most famous fireworks show, too. I really enjoy listening to the symphony before the show. This is my favorite holiday!
The group passes under an entrance to the park with a forth of July banner and Ping takes a picture.
Lu	Why is the fourth of July a holiday?
Mrs. Moore	Good question, Lu. July 4 th is also called Independence Day. Americans celebrate their country's independence from England on July 4 th .
Lu	Independence? What do you mean?
Mrs. Moore	Before 1781, European countries owned a lot of America. European people moved here. They were colonists. England owned most of the eastern part of the country. There were 13 English colonies. After the Revolutionary War, the colonies became the first American states.
Mr. Moore	The colonists didn't like the English government. They paid taxes to England. However, they could not make big decisions about their colonies. The English government made all of the decisions. The colonists wanted their own country. They decided to leave England.
Shannon	Representatives from all of the colonies met in Philadelphia in 1776. They were the Continental Congress. They talked for a long time. Finally, the representatives wrote an important document. It was the Declaration of Independence from England. The Continental Congress adopted the Declaration of Independence on July 4, 1776. So, we call July 4 th "Independence Day."

Ping	Did England like the Declaration of Independence?
Lloyd	Oh, no! The English king sent a big army to America. The colonists fought the English army. The war was called the Revolutionary War. It lasted for 5 years. Finally, the colonists won the war. They were free from English rule. They created a new country -- the United States of America.
The group passes an actor dressed as Ben Franklin passing out small flags. Ping takes a picture.
Lu	I got a flag! Who was that? Was he a president?
Mr. Moore	No, that was Benjamin Franklin. He was a famous inventor. He really wanted independence from England. He was a great American patriot and a famous writer. He wrote many important documents during the Revolutionary War.
Ping	What is a patriot?
Mrs. Moore	A patriot really loves and defends his country.
Shannon	Benjamin Franklin wrote the Declaration of Independence, didn't he?
Mr. Moore	Well, no. Benjamin Franklin signed the Declaration of Independence. He was one of the members of the Continental Congress.
Lloyd	Thomas Jefferson wrote most of the Declaration of Independence. He was third U.S. president. George Washington was the first president. He was also a great general during the Revolutionary War.
Mr. Moore	Here is a strange fact. Both Thomas Jefferson and the second president, John Adams, died on the 4 th of July in 1826. It was exactly 50 years after the Declaration of Independence! Oh, look! That actor is Thomas Jefferson.
The group passes an actor dressed as Thomas Jefferson passing out copies of the D. of I. Ping gets a copy and takes a picture.
DeShawn	Hey! It is getting late. We need to get to the Mall.
Mrs. Moore	Okay, everyone. Come on. The subway station is over there.
Scene changes to Capitol Mall. There are loads of people. The sun is setting. The orchestra is tuning up.
Mrs. Moore	This is a good spot. We can put our blanket here.
Ping	Wow! There are a lot of people here! You could get lost!
DeShawn	Yep. This is the country's biggest birthday party. However, you don't need to worry about getting lost.

	You can always find us. We have the brightest pink blanket here!
Ping	I used to worry about getting lost in America. Now, I know what to do!
Lu	This celebration is the biggest birthday party? Oh, I get it. The 4 th of July is the United State’s birthday! How many people are here?
Mr. Moore	Here Ping, Lu. I printed this from the Internet. More than 500,000 people will come here tonight. Millions more will watch the show on television. It is going to be terrific! We’ll get to see some of the most famous stars and bands.
Lloyd	We’ll see an amazing fireworks display, too. The fireworks are great, but they are really loud.
Lu	How loud are the fireworks?
Lloyd	You can’t talk during fireworks because you can’t hear each other. You have to yell, and that bothers other people.
Ping	How long is the show?
Shannon	The show is an hour and a half long. It starts at 8:00 p.m. The fireworks are from about 9 p.m. to 9:30.
Deshawn	This is great. I love seeing a good show with friends.
Lu	I really wanted to make friends in the U.S. Thank you for being my friends!
Shannon	You’re welcome. You are a great friend, Lu. Hey, listen. The orchestra is tuning up. The show is going to start soon.
Scene changes. It is dark and the orchestra is in full swing. The fireworks have just started. We see the group sitting on the blanket, from behind. The fireworks are in the black sky above them. Patriotic music plays. Ping is the only standing and occasionally we see the flash of her camera.
Lloyd	(BOOM) Wow! That is the best one.
DeShawn	(BOOM) That is the brightest one.
Shannon	(BOOM) That is the loudest one. It is too loud for me!
Mr. Moore	That was the worst one.
Lu	Oh, look at those! Those are the tallest ones.
Group	Ahhh, ooh aaahh.
Scene changes. Group is packed into the train on the way home.
Lloyd	That was the best celebration yet!
Lu	It was great!

Shannon	Ping, what are you going to do with your pictures?
Ping	I don't know. I am excited to see them.
Shannon	Me, too. You should make a scrapbook.
Ping	OK! But I will need some help!

how long,	“How” is one of several words used to ask a question. There are three basic question types in English: “yes/no” questions (the answer to the question is “yes” or “no”); “question word” questions (the answer to the question is information); and “choice” questions (the answer to the question is in the question). Questions that begin with “how” are “question word” questions. Question words are who, what, when, where, how and why. The speaker who asks a “question word” question wants or needs information, as in “How many people will see the show?” The answer is more than 500,000 people will attend.
best, most exciting	“Best,” “worst,” “largest,” “smallest,” “tallest,” “biggest” and “most exciting” are used to show comparison. Comparison is defined as the forms of an adjective or adverb that indicate degrees in quality, quantity or manner. In English, those three levels or degrees are positive, comparative and superlative. “Best,” “worst,” “largest,” “smallest,” “tallest,” “biggest” and “most exciting” are all in the superlative degree. The positive degree of comparison is the simple form. Examples are large or exciting (adjectives) or soon (an adverb). The comparative degree indicates a higher or lower degree of quality or manner than is expressed by the positive degree. The comparative is used when two things are compared and is usually formed by adding “-er” to the positive degree (larger, sooner). In longer words, the comparative is formed by adding “more” or “less” to the positive, as in more exciting or less exciting. The superlative degree denotes the highest or lowest degree of quality or manner. The superlative is used when more than two things are compared and is usually formed by adding “-est” to the positive degree (largest, soonest). In longer words, the superlative is formed by adding “most” or “least” to the positive, as in most exciting or least exciting.

National Symphony Orchestra	The national symphony orchestra is the orchestra of the U.S. capital and regularly participates in events of national and international importance, including performances for state occasions, presidential inaugurations and official holiday celebrations. The orchestra has 100 musicians that present 175 concerts each year. It was founded in 1931 and has served the nation through tours, broadcasts, and other special projects throughout it's history.

Independence Day	Independence Day is celebrated on July 4 because that is the day when the Continental Congress adopted the final draft of the Declaration of Independence. Every July fourth, Americans have a holiday from work. Communities have day-long picnics with favorite foods like hot dogs, hamburgers, potato salad, baked beans and all the fixings. The afternoon activities would not be complete without lively music, a friendly baseball game, three-legged races and pie-eating or watermelon-eating contests. Some cities have parades with people dressed as the original founding fathers who march in parades to the music of high school bands. At dusk, people in towns and cities gather to watch the fireworks display. Wherever Americans are around the globe, they will get together for a traditional 4th of July celebration!

Featured Cultural Content

American Revolution	During the two hundred fifty years following Christopher Columbus' discovery of America in 1492, many groups of people established colonies in the "New World." These groups were from a variety of European countries including Spain, England, France and Holland. Many of these colonists fled religious persecution in their home countries. The colonies set up their own governments, which took on a variety of forms. Treaties were signed between the colonists and Native Americans but several violent conflicts broke out between the parties. Many of the colonies fell under English rule as England won various wars in Europe and expanded its empire worldwide. In the 1760s and 1770s, the English Parliament (later called the British Parliament) passed a number of objectionable acts applied to the colonies, including prohibiting them from printing their own currency, prohibiting self-rule, enacting various taxes, and requiring the colonists to provide food and housing to British troops. In 1774 the first Continental Congress met in Philadelphia with 56 delegates representing 12 of the 13 English colonies. They passed a Declaration and Resolves opposing the various acts against self-rule. By 1775 the colonists began defensive preparations for a war and several local rebellions erupted. The British army responded with deadly force. Many events of the Revolutionary War are taught to schoolchildren in America. There was the famous "Midnight Ride of Paul Revere" who was sent from Boston to Lexington to warn the colonists of an impending attack. The first major battle of the war was the battle of Bunker Hill in Boston where the colonists defending Breed's Hill (the actual location) were advised to not fire on the British soldiers until they could see "the whites of their eyes." In the spring of 1776, France and Spain offered their support to the revolutionaries. On July 4th, the Continental Congress officially endorsed a document drafted by Thomas Jefferson: the Declaration of Independence (of America from British rule). The fighting escalated. On September 22, Nathan Hale was caught spying on British troops in New York. He was executed without a trial and his last words were, "I regret that I have but one life to lose for my country." On December 25 and 26, Washington and 2,400 troops crossed the Delaware River and conducted a surprise attack defeating 1,500 Hessian soldiers in Trenton, New Jersey. This victory did much for the colonists' flagging morale. In 1777, George Washington and the troops survived a devastating winter at Valley Forge. Their loyalty to Washington and the cause of freedom sustained the troops. The fighting continued for four more years until British General Cornwallis surrendered to General Washington at Yorktown on October 19, 1781. But it wasn't until September 3, 1783, that the Treaty of Paris was signed, formally ending the war.
The Declaration of Independence	Despite the actions of the British, the American colonists weren't immediately united in whether or not to officially declare their independence from British rule. But eventually the Continental Congress came together to pass the Declaration of Independence on July 4, 1776. The final document contained only a few signification changes from Thomas Jefferson's original draft. A condemnation of the British slave trade was removed at the insistence of pro-slavery delegates to the Continental Congress. And a condemnation of the British people was also removed.

	The Declaration is composed of three parts. The first is an introduction that states the reasons for embracing independence. This section was based on the “natural rights” philosophy of English philosopher John Locke, who proposed that people offer obedience to government in return for the government’s pledge to protect the natural rights of life, liberty and property. The Declaration refers to “life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness.” The next section covers a series of indictments against King George III, the Parliament and royal officials. The conclusion contains the words of delegate Richard Henry Lee, “That these United Colonies are, and of Right ought to be Free and Independent States; that they are Absolved from all Allegiance to the British Crown, and that all political connection between them and the State of Great Britain, is and ought to be totally dissolved...” The formal signing of the document by 50 delegates occurred on August 2, 1776. Four other signatures were ultimately added between then and 1781.
