

David W. Gray

Director, Office of External Affairs

David Gray is the Director, Office of External Affairs with the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) Region 6 in Dallas, Texas. He has directed the EPA's public affairs program for the five state central south region since 1995. He has made it his mission to improve the public's access to the federal government and the public's awareness of EPA's activities.

Mr. Gray opened the first EPA Dallas Public Information Center to provide toll-free public access for people living throughout the five state area. To help increase public awareness, Mr. Gray has led the effort to make available senior government officials to the media across the region, and to the public through a wide range of public speaking events from community roundtables to larger conferences.

Mr. Gray oversees intergovernmental affairs, including interactions with Congress, State Legislatures, Mayors, Local Governments and Small Communities, for the region to ensure their concerns and interests are addressed by the agency. He also oversees the Environmental Education program to provide unbiased information to students and teachers helping them better make environmental decisions.

David Gray has been working at EPA since May 1987 and has been affiliated with almost every environmental program in the Region. Before joining EPA, Mr. Gray worked as an environmental consultant for a Pennsylvania-based company.
