	OUR WARRIOR'S NOT THERE
	SOLEMNLY, tearfully Breathed the strain, Weep for the hero in Death's cold arms lain. Mourn for the wanderer, Pray for the brave, Plant sweetest flowerets Above his lone grave.
	God, in much mercy, Has called him away, Bravest and noblest With us cannot stay; Fondly the angel band Greet the new flower Planted in "sunny land," Paradise'd bower.
	Loudly the cannon's roar Thunders afar, Bright, lurid flashes now Bringeth stern war! Steel clashing with steel, Swords gleaming bright, Plumes waving to and fro, Desperate fight!
	Fiery steed—frenzied men, Scenting the strife, Wading through pools of blood, Yielding up life: Waving the stars and stripes In ether blue, Battling for Liberty— Principle true.
	Guarding the Nation's trust, Fearless and bold, Wrapping the hero's dust In starry fold; Marching to victory, Freedom so rare, Drums beating merrily— Tilly's not there!
	Gone is the warrior true, Stern, daring brave, He who fought cheerfully Our land to save; Gone to the silent tomb, Labor is done, Sorrow and pain is o'er— Victory's won!
	Bring choicest flowers to strew Over his breast, Emblems of purity— Loved by the blest: Fragrant the lily white, Spotless and fair, Weeps o'er the hero's dust— Tilly's not there!
