

no harm to infants and children will result from acute exposure to etoxazole.

iii. Chronic risk. The potential chronic exposure from food to infants and children are estimated to be 0.64 to 1.62% of the proposed cPAD. Chronic exposure to potential residues in drinking water is expected to be negligible, as chronic DWLOC's are substantially higher than modeled DWEC's. Based on this assessment, it can be concluded that, there is a reasonable certainty that no harm to infants and children will result from chronic exposure to etoxazole.

3. Safety determination summary. Aggregate acute or chronic dietary exposure to various subpopulations of children and adults demonstrate acceptable risk. Acute and chronic dietary exposures to etoxazole occupy considerably less than 100% of the appropriate PAD. EPA generally has no concern for exposures below 100% of the acute and chronic PAD's because these represent levels at or below which daily aggregate dietary exposure over a lifetime will not pose appreciable risks to human health. Chronic and acute dietary risk to children from etoxazole should not be of concern. Further, etoxazole has only agricultural uses and no other uses, such as indoor pest control, homeowner or turf, that could lead to unique, enhanced exposures to vulnerable sub-groups of the population. It can be concluded that, there is a reasonable certainty that no harm will result to the U.S. population or to any sub-group of the U.S. population, including infants and children, from aggregate chronic or aggregate acute exposures to etoxazole residues resulting from the proposed uses.

F. International Tolerances

Etoxazole has not been evaluated by the JMPR and there are no codex maximum residue limits (MRL) for etoxazole. MRL values have been established for etoxazole in the following countries: Turkey, Israel, South Africa, Japan, France, Taiwan, and Korea. The use pattern and MRL's are similar to those proposed for the U.S.

The Commission is establishing a new service, the new rules contain over 20 new one-time burdens. These burdens include the cost of equipment necessary to offer digital service. The Commission also imposes Paperwork Reduction Act (PRA) burdens aimed at minimizing the opportunity for interference and continuing to offer the public the highest quality viewing services possible during the transition to digital television. All of the burdens are one-time burdens and are the minimum needed to ensure a smooth, rapid transition to the myriad of opportunities offered by digital television technology.

Section 74.786 requires an applicant for a new low power television translator digital station or for changes in the facilitates of an authorized digital station shall endeavor to select a channel on which its operation is not likely to cause interference. The applications must be specific with regard to the channel requested. Only one channel will be assigned to each station. Stations proposed use of such channels shall notify all potentially affected 700 MHz wireless licenses not later than 30 days prior to the submission of their application (FCC Form 346).

Section 74.787 states applications for digital conversion channels may be filed at any time. Such applications shall be filed on FCC Form 346 and will be treated as a minor change application. Also, this rule section covers applications for companion digital

During this window, only existing low power television or television translator stations or licensees or permittees of Class A TV stations may submit applications for companion digital channels. Construction permit applications for new stations, major changes to existing station in the low power television service are also covered under this rule section. This can be done on FCC Form 346.

Section 74.790 states that DTV translator stations provide a means whereby the signals of DTV broadcast stations may be retransmitted to areas in which direct reception of such DTV stations is unsatisfactory due to distance or intervening terrain barriers.

Section 74.794 requires that an applicant for a digital Low Power TV (LPTV) or TV translator station construction permit shall specify that the station will be constructed to confine out-of-channel emissions within one of the following masks: simple or stringent.
