“Lion Taming” Author Steve Katz Will Speak to Federal Communicators

Washington, DC--Steven Katz, author of “Lion Taming: Working Successfully with Leaders, Bosses, and other Tough Customers,” will conduct a free workshop for federal communicators and clients of Treasury’s Federal Consulting Group on April 20, 2005.

The workshop, co-sponsored by FCG and the Federal Communicators Network, will run from 8:30 a.m. - noon in the Amphitheater, 1700 G St., NW, Washington, DC. A continental breakfast will be available at 8:30 a.m.

“This is a return visit for Steve Katz,” said Anne Kelly, CEO of the Federal Consulting Group. “He was featured at the quarterly meeting of federal executive coaches in January and he was a real hit. We wanted to bring him back.”

“Comparing yourself to a lion tamer will help you deal with the strong and powerful around you,” Katz says on his Website. “Lion Taming is everyone's real job of working with people who wield power and influence around us — leaders, bosses, customers, clients, employees, and others.”

Steven L. Katz worked for more than twenty years as a right-hand executive and senior advisor to leaders and executives across the worlds of business, non-profit organizations, politics, and government, including serving as legal counsel to Senator John Glenn. He has degrees in anthropology, history, and law. He lives with his family outside Washington, D.C. Steve Katz <http://www.liontaming.com/about/index.cfm>

The Federal Consulting Group, a fee-for-service franchise in the Department of the Treasury, works with federal agencies to transform public service. FCG collaborates with senior leaders to create a citizen-centered, results-oriented government and facilitates the sharing of best practices from the public and private sectors.
