Samuel A. Fortner

Sir,

In my personal opinion, upon reading the related materials, I feel that the human genomic sequence is a natural phenomenon, and no individual or corporation should control or have ownership of something that is found in nature. The information contained in the human genomic sequence is too important to all of us to regulate its use for financial gain. To limit its access in any way places a possible limit on the discoveries and solutions that may be found by independent researchers in the future. This is a new frontier of knowledge. The possibilities are endless.

Sincerely,

Samual A Fortner
