HS DATABASES AND WEBSITES

(Item II.10 on Agenda)

I. BACKGROUND

1. It recently occurred to the Secretariat that many databases and Web sites had been developed on the Harmonized System, but that the Secretariat and our Member administrations were not aware of the existence of all of these sites or the information they provided. For these reasons, the Secretariat decided to undertake a survey of these HS databases and Web sites with a view to developing an inventory of such databases and sites and providing this information to our Member administrations.

II. SECRETARIAT SURVEY

2. The results of the Secretariat's survey are set out in the Annex to this document. The Secretariat was, frankly, surprised at the number of databases and Web sites it was able to find (31). This is clearly another measure of the Harmonized System's universal acceptance and importance in international trade. We are not trying to portray this inventory as being exhaustive; it is merely a listing of everything we have been able to find to date. We would certainly encourage administrations to supplement the information presented with additional information at their disposal.
3. We believe that the information presented in the Annex is self-explanatory. We would merely note that the Annex contains information on governmental, intergovernmental and private databases and Web-sites, commercial and free databases and sites, and databases and Web sites in developed and developing countries. The information and search capabilities presented range from very basic to extremely sophisticated.
4. In presenting this information, the Secretariat is not endorsing any of these products. We are merely making their existence known to our members and leaving it to our members to decide whether any of these databases and Web sites would be of interest or use to them in their work.

5. That having been said, we intend to update this information periodically for the benefit of administrations and would request any information that Members might have to supplement the inventory set out in the Annex or any corrections they might have to offer.

III. CONCLUSION

6. Administrations are asked to take note of the information provided and to offer any comments and/or information they might have to improve the inventory set out in the Annex to this document.
