

Adaptation for Climate Change on the Olympic National Forest

Kathy O'Halloran
Olympic National Forest

Thursday, April 2, 2009, 1100 - 1215
Roosevelt Conference Room

Climate change is already impacting the production of environmental services provided by the Nation's forests and grasslands--impacts will grow as climate change continues. The Olympic National Forest is working with Pacific Northwest Station scientists and partners to better understand what climate change might bring and how they and the communities they serve can best adapt the lands and waters they manage and depend on.

Contact: Greg Kujawa, gkujawa@fs.fed.us, 205-1762