Start capping the amount of fees banks can charge their customers so they shift some of their fee income to their business accounts. We pay next to nothing for our account which is great, except for the fact that our business in general is slowed down greatly and I would tend to think that these absorbant fees that banks are charging are emptying our customers bank accounts of money they could be spending with a variety of other businesses and actually stimulate the economy! Besides, you're allowing them to charge fees for services that weren't necessarily requested or wanted. If we or any other business did that we would have the attorney general all over us. Why? Because it's not right and no business should be allowed to conduct operations in this manner.
