Assessing listening

By Gary Buck

Cambridge, UK:
Cambridge University
Press, 2001.

418.007 BUC

Listening is a key skill and teachers need to assess their students' listening ability. This book shows language teachers and testing practitioners how to assess listening comprehension. The intention is not to discuss theory and research for their own sake, but only sufficiently for practitioners to know how to construct language tests, the conditions that can have an impact on listening tests and how to interpret the test results.

Cognition and second language instruction

By Peter Robinson
Cambridge, MA; New York, N.Y : Cambridge University Press, 2001.

401.9 COG

The influence of cognitive processing on second language acquisition (SLA), and on the development of second language (SL) instruction, has always been a subject of major interest to both SLA researchers and those involved in SL pedagogy. Recent theoretical research into these areas has shown renewed interest in the role of cognitive variables such as attention, short, working, and long term memory. This volume examines the theoretical foundations of research into the cognitive processes underlying SLA, and describes various implications for pedagogically oriented research and for SL classroom practice.
