

468 species of birds and 20 hours of sunlight.

Now that, friends, is “extreme birding.”

There's nothing like identifying the Bristle-Thighed Curlew at 2 a.m. Or spotting the shy but always stylish Whiskered Auklet for the first time. And there's no airline that covers the last frontier like Alaska Airlines. We fly to 20 cities throughout the state, with nonstops from the West Coast and Chicago, and easy connections from six East Coast points. All of which mean the 49th State is closer than you think. Just don't forget your life list. So start your Alaska adventure at alaskaair.com or call 1-800-252-7522. For information on the State of Alaska's birding certificate program, "Wings over Alaska," visit www.birding.alaska.gov.

Whiskered Auklet, a rare alcid found in the Aleutians.
