

U.S.-China Symposium on Postal Reform, Regulation and Express Delivery
Services, Beijing, September 17-18, 2007

The U.S. Department of Commerce and the State Postal Bureau of the People's Republic of China will co-host the U.S.-China Symposium on Postal Reform, Regulation and Express Delivery Services in Beijing, September 17-18, 2007. The symposium will bring together government and industry experts to exchange knowledge and information on key issues in postal reform and regulation pertaining to the express delivery services sector. The symposium will serve to provide both the United States and China with a greater understanding of each other's experience and perspectives on postal reform and regulation of the express delivery services market.

Those interested in attending the symposium should contact Tom Dycus at thomas_dycus@ita.doc.gov or 202-482-2295. Please note space is limited. Your attendance is not official until you receive a confirmation email. Confirmation emails will be sent by Tuesday, August 21. If you have any questions, please contact Tom Dycus.

When you email your interest in attending, please indicate the following:

1. Name
2. Title
3. Organization
4. Email
5. Phone