

Advisory Council on Government Auditing Standards

Gene L. Dodaro, Acting Comptroller General of the United States and head of the U.S. Government Accountability Office, made new appointments to the Advisory Council on Government Auditing Standards. The Council provides advice and guidance to the Comptroller General on government auditing standards.

The Comptroller General first issued standards for government auditing in 1972; major revisions were issued in 1981, 1988, 1994, 2003, and 2007. Certain laws, regulations, and contracts require auditors to follow generally accepted government auditing standards promulgated by the Comptroller General of the United States. They are widely used in audits of federal, state, and local government programs, as well as in audits of entities receiving federal assistance. They have also been adopted by numerous countries.

Government auditing is a key element in fulfilling the government's duty to be accountable to the public. Government auditing standards provide a framework to auditors so that their work can lead to improved government management, decision making, oversight and accountability. The standards also provide an overall framework for ensuring that auditors have the competence, integrity, objectivity, and independence in planning, conducting, and reporting on their work.

The newly appointed members will join the continuing members of the Council.
