Communities of Faith Partnership

From the moment we draw our first breath, and feel our first nurturing embrace, we become connected to our family, our home and the world around us. The basic need to be cared for and protected is sewn deeply within our being. So is the need to protect and care for others.

To many, caring for our environment is a calling; transcending resource management to become a stewardship centered upon foundational moral responsibilities.

We at the South Coast Air Quality Management District (AQMD) understand this and invite you to be part of our Clean Air Congress Communities of Faith Partnership. Our goal is to inform and to encourage your participation in critical policy issues surrounding air quality and its impacts on our health and environment.

The Communities of Faith Partnership represents a wide cross section of faith communities throughout the AQMD region. We agree with the importance of environmental stewardship and are committed to engaging faith-based organizations to be an active part of the decision making process and join in the effort to restore clean, healthful air within our region.

One of the most effective ways to prevent air pollution is to stay informed and get involved. In order to provide information on the health effects of air pollution to the community and to help engage the community in efforts to improve the air quality in San Bernardino, AQMD, local health care providers and the members of the faith community invite you to attend San Bernardino's first Healthy Air-Healthy Communities Fair.
