

SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF INDIANA COUNTER PROLIFERATION TASK FORCE PRESENTS

HOW GOOD COMPANIES GET IN TROUBLE: EXPORT COMPLIANCE

Foreign states and terrorist organizations are actively seeking to acquire technical data, knowledge and equipment from United States industry partners to advance their technological capacity and ability to build weapons systems and weapons of mass destruction (WMD) programs. "How Good Companies Get In Trouble: Export Compliance," will expose industry executives, lawyers and compliance officers to enforcement information, principles of effective compliance programs, criminal and civil ramifications associated with failing to comply with export laws, and additional tools to harness various export control/proliferation related assets.
