OLD BEDLAM
FORT LARAMIE NATIONAL MONUMENT

Fort Laramie National Historic Site

Established as a trading post in 1834 on a site between the North Platte and Laramie Rivers in present-day Wyoming, Fort Laramie played a pivotal role in the transformation of the American West. Over a period of 56 years, the fort served as a social and economic center for many tribes of Plains Indians, a resting place and supply center for wagon trains on the Oregon Trail bound for the Pacific Northwest, an Army garrison, a station on the Central route of the Pony Express, a critical point on the first transcontinental telegraph line, and a military operations center.

The wood-framed bachelor officers' quarters building known as "Old Bedlam" dates from 1849, the year the Gold Rush was at its height. Although relations between the Plains Indians and travelers along the Oregon Trail had been good for several years, they had deteriorated by 1849, one consequence of which was the establishment of an Army garrison at Fort Laramie and the assignment of troops along the Trail. The Fort Laramie (Horse Creek) Treaty of 1851 signed by the United States and several Plains Indian tribes helped ease the tension between the tribes and the travelers and troops, but that détente was short-lived. Within a couple years, skirmishes between soldiers and the Indian tribes had resumed. In 1876, Fort Laramie served as an anchor for Army military operations, communication, supply, and logistics during the Great Sioux War.

Other surviving military buildings at Fort Laramie include the Old Guard House and the Sutler's Store. Built in 1866, the sandstone Guard House contained living spaces and the fort jail. The adobe and sandstone Sutler's, or Post Trader's, Store (1850 and after) sold supplies beyond the bare necessities the soldiers had received from the Army. The Store also served the many wagon trains on the Trail.

The last garrison of the post marched out of Fort Laramie in 1890. In 1938, President Franklin D. Roosevelt proclaimed the fort a national monument because of its "great historic interest" as a relic of westward expansion. The Fort became a national historic site in 1960.

The Historic American Buildings Survey recorded Fort Laramie soon after President Roosevelt proclaimed it a national monument. The documentation is available free of charge through the Library of Congress's Built in America web site (http://memory.loc.gov/ammem/collections/habs_haer/).

Dear colleagues:

Welcome to the 11th edition of the Directory of National Park Service Historians. This electronic edition includes more than 275 historians and other National Park Service staff who work so that people in parks and communities nationwide experience history in real places and appreciate the depth and diversity of our shared national heritage.

The year 2006 is a banner anniversary year for heritage stewardship. The National Park Service Organic Act turns 90 this month. The National Historic Preservation Act turns 40 in October. The Antiquities Act reached 100 on June 8. The Antiquities Act testifies to the vision of its creators, who saw to passage legislation that effectively represents national priorities and values with regard to heritage. Today, the Act protects a diverse array of natural and cultural treasures, from Devil's Tower in Wyoming, the nation's first national monument (1906), to the Northwestern Hawaiian Islands Marine National Monument in the Pacific Ocean, the nation's newest (2006). Information and commentaries on these and other National Park Service milestones are available from the Park History website (www.cr.nps.gov/history).

I am very pleased to introduce this directory. My experience in the Heritage Documentation Programs demonstrated the value of researching, knowing, and recording our history. That program's move forward into the digital age would not have happened had it not been for the renewed interest in the origins and evolution of the Historic American Buildings Survey on occasion of its 70th anniversary in 2003. Caught in a storm of technological change, we let history be our guide. We were able to adapt to new technological realities and increase our effectiveness without compromising our original mission.

Past editions of this directory have helped immeasurably in fostering a sense of community and collegiality among historians and like-minded individuals across the National Park System. It is my hope that this edition will continue and strengthen that connection.

Martin Perschler
Acting Chief Historian
August 2006

The 2006-2007 directory lists National Park Service historians from the following categories:

- NPS employees officially classified as historians by inclusion in the GS-170 series.
- Persons not in the GS-170 series who (1) have either a graduate degree in history or a bachelor's degree in history with a record of graduate - level scholarship in publications or other media, and (2) are engaged primarily in historical research, historical interpretation, or cultural resource management.
- Employees with a PhD in history whose positions are not primarily history - related but who maintain currency in the profession and wish to be included.

The directory includes the following information on each person listed:

- Name (last, first, middle initial)
- Highest academic degree, granting school, year granted
- Areas of professional specialty (e.g., U.S. military, African American, CRM)
- Position title, park or office, mailing address, telephone number, fax number, e-mail address (where available)

Please submit any changes to: Park History, National Park Service, 1849 C Street NW (2261), Washington, DC 20240 or fax 202-371-2229. Special thanks to Jennifer Perunko for the design and layout of this directory.
