

Although eighty-six percent of U.S. employment was found in metropolitan areas, some occupations were concentrated in nonmetropolitan areas.

Eighty-six percent of U.S. employment is found in metropolitan areas, but some occupations were concentrated in nonmetropolitan areas. (Over half as many logging, mining, and extraction workers are found in nonmetropolitan areas.)
