ADMINISTRATIVE PROCEEDINGS

NASD ACTION AGAINST RICHARD ROUSE MODIFIED

The Commission has modified NASD disciplinary action against Richard J. Rouse of Littleton, Colorado. Rouse was formerly compliance director for Blinder, Robinson & Co. Inc. (Blinder Robinson), a former NASD member firm. The Commission affirmed the NASD's censure of Rouse, but set aside a $1500 fine and the NASD's requirement that Rouse requalify as a general securities principal.

The Commission found that Rouse was responsible for Blinder Robinson's failure to respond in a timely manner to six NASD requests for information, sent in April-May 1989, in connection with NASD investigations. Although the submissions when finally received were complete, Rouse provided the requested information to the three initial requests and three follow-up letters from 27 to 84 days after the deadline appearing in the initial requests for information. Although it noted that Rouse had not intended to deliberately withhold information from the NASD, the Commission stated that Rouse's late responses constituted a "refusal" to respond. Rouse also made no attempt to contact the NASD to explain why the deadlines could not be met. The Commission found that Rouse, as the firm's compliance director and addressee on the letters, could be held responsible for the firm's late responses.

Despite its findings of violation, the Commission found the NASD's sanctions excessive. The Commission set aside the fine and requalification requirement, acknowledging the extraordinary demands placed on Rouse at the time of the violations because of the numerous federal and state investigations against Blinder Robinson. It also noted that Rouse had improved Blinder Robinson's compliance procedures and had maintained good relations with regulators. It stated, however, that its decision to set aside certain sanctions "should in no way be read to diminish the importance of timely compliance with the NASD's requests for information."
