

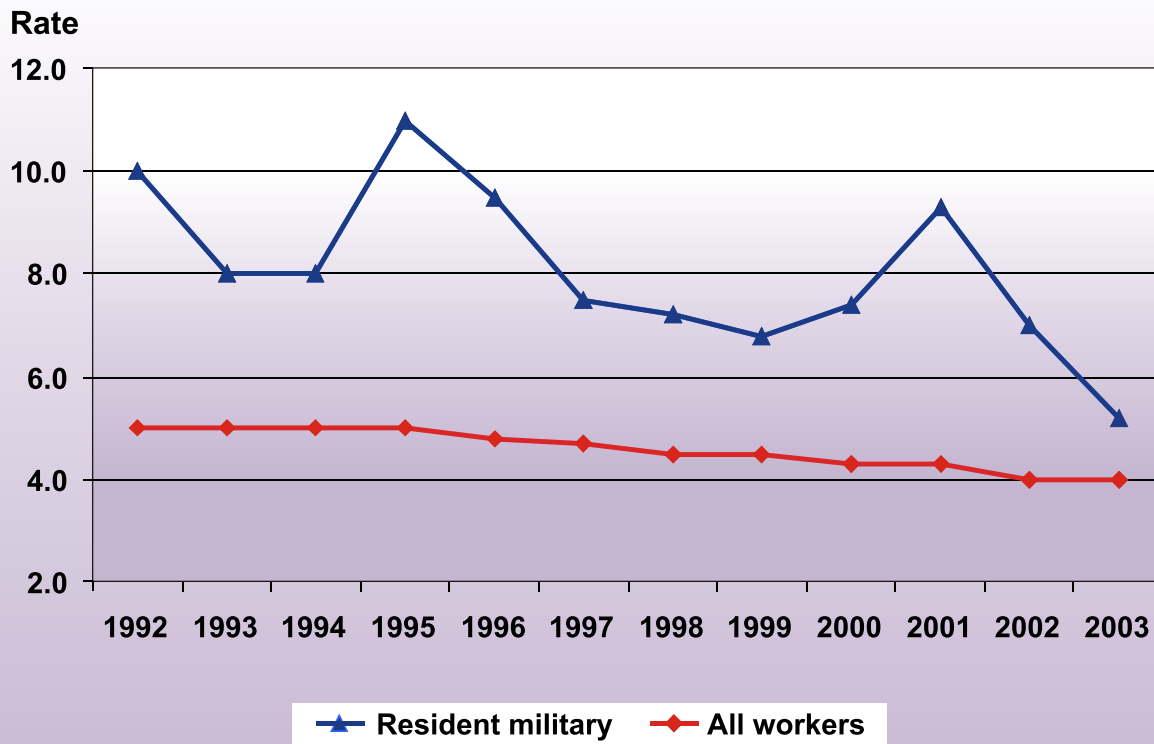

chart 28

The fatality rate of resident military personnel consistently exceeded that of all workers from 1992 to 2003.

Military workers were more likely than workers in general to be killed in multiple-fatality incidents (particularly transportation incidents) and in suicides.

Fatality rates for the resident military and all workers, 1992–2003

SOURCE: Pegula, Stephen, "Fatal Occupational Injuries to Members of the Resident Military," Compensation and Working Conditions Online, April 2005.