

Adult Multiple Intelligences and Differentiated Instruction

Course Dates: March 12–May 13, 2008; Online chats during Lessons 3, 4, and 5

Course Description

Research conducted by the National Center for the Study of Adult Learning and Literacy shows that instructional practices inspired by Multiple Intelligences (MI) theory resulted in high levels of authentic instruction and student engagement.

Integrate your understanding of Multiple Intelligences (MI) theory with the power of differentiated instruction in this facilitated, eight-session course. You'll learn how to apply MI theory and differentiate instruction for all levels of adult basic education and English for speakers of other languages. The facilitator will guide you as you develop your own MI-based lessons.

Objectives

Upon completion of this course you will be able to:

- *Apply the theory of multiple intelligences (MI) to design learning activities that match your learning objectives
- *Use varying methods of differentiated instruction (DI) that address the different skills and interests of your learners
- *Apply knowledge of your own MI profile to your classroom teaching
- *Produce and reflect on a lesson or unit using both MI and DI
