AGENCY RECOVERY SITES

On February 17, 2009, the day after President Obama signed the American Recovery and Reinvestment Act into law, the Office of Management and Budget Director Peter Orszag sent a detailed memo to the heads of all departments and agencies receiving funds from the act, offering guidance for how to meet the President's high expectations for transparency and accountability.

In response, many have established their own Recovery Act web pages. Use the links below to learn more about how the different agencies and departments are spending the funds allocated to them by the ARRA. But keep in mind, many more pages will come online -- with much more information -- in the weeks and months ahead, so check back often for updates.
