

women in philosophy

If philosophy articulates the human experience and the experiences of women find little expression throughout history, then how well can we philosophize?

Come hear faculty, graduate students, and undergraduates discuss:

To what extent is sexism still at work in the academy and in the classroom?

Are the current models for evaluating performance oppressive towards women?

Is institutionalized philosophy antagonistic towards women?

You don't have to be a woman -- or a philosopher! -- to care about what it is like to be a woman in philosophy!
