

MATTHEW M. BABCOCK
(Last Updated: August 30, 2019)

Work Phone Number: 972-338-1554
Office Number and Building: 220 DAL 2
Work E-Mail Address: Matthew.Babcock@untDallas.edu

UNT Dallas Campus
7400 University Hills Blvd
Dallas, TX 75241

AREA OF EXPERTISE

My teaching and research focus on the history of North American borderlands, American Indians, and the colonial Southwest. My research interests include cross-cultural trade and diplomacy, territoriality, and indigenous adaptation to incorporation. In both my teaching and research I strive to reach as wide an audience as possible by employing a global and comparative perspective.

EDUCATION

2008	Ph.D.	History	Southern Methodist University
2001	M.A.	History	University of New Mexico
1995	B.A.	History and Spanish	Dartmouth College

PROFESSIONAL EXPERIENCE

2018-Present	Dept. of History	Program Coordinator
2017-Present	Dept. of History & Political Science	Associate Professor, History
2016-2018	Dept. of History & Political Science	Program Coordinator
2014-2016	Dept. of Social Sciences, Sociology, & Psychology	Program Coordinator
2010-2017	Dept. of Social Sciences, University of North Texas at Dallas, Dallas, TX	Assistant Professor, History
2009/2010	Center for Regional Heritage Research, Dept. of Liberal and Applied Arts, SFASU	Research Associate
2009/2010	Dept. of History, SFASU, Nacogdoches, TX	Adjunct Instructor
2008/2009	Dept. of History, SFASU, Nacogdoches, TX	Visiting Assistant Professor
2006	Dept. of History, Austin College, Sherman, TX	Visiting Instructor
2004	Dept. of History, SMU, Dallas, TX	Instructor

SCHOLARSHIP

Apache Adaptation to Hispanic Rule (New York: Cambridge University Press, 2016).

"Territoriality and the Historiography of Early North America," Journal of American Studies 50:3 (August 2016): 515-536.

"Native Americans" in Discovering Texas History: A Guide to the History of the Lone Star State, eds. Bruce A. Glasrud, Light Townsend Cummins, and Cary D. Wintz (Norman: University of Oklahoma Press, 2014), 15-30.

"Blurred Borders: The Forgotten Apache Reservations of Early America," in The Contested Spaces of Early America, eds. Juliana Barr and Edward Countryman (Philadelphia: University of Pennsylvania Press, 2014), 163-183.

"Roots of Independence: Transcultural Trade in the Texas-Louisiana Borderlands," Ethnohistory 60: 2 (Spring 2013): 245-68.

Arxer, Steven L., Babcock, Matthew, and Borges, Walter. "Progressivism and Economics: The Case of President Obama," in Grading the 44th President: A Report Card on Barack Obama's First Term as a Progressive President, eds. Luigi Esposito and Laura Finley (Santa Barbara, CA: Praeger, 2012), 21-40.

Babcock, Matthew. "La relocalisation des Apaches et leur aptitude à la résilience, ou comment ils se sont adaptés à leur intégration par les Espagnols," Recherches amérindiennes au Québec 41: 2-3 (2011): 43-59.

Babcock, Matthew M. "Rethinking the establecimientos: Why Apaches Settled on Spanish-run Reservations, 1786-1793" New Mexico Historical Review 84 (Summer 2009): 363-397.

Babcock, Matthew M. "Rethinking the establecimientos: Why Apaches Settled on Spanish-run Reservations, 1786-1793," in El Gran Norte Mexicano: Indios, misioneros y pobladores entre el mito y la historia. Edited by Salvador Bernabéu Albert. Sevilla: Consejo Superior de Investigaciones Científicas, 2008, 95-136.