

Dr. Oliver Yu

Danforth Plant Science Center
St. Louis, MO

“Flavonoids and Auxin-Related microRNAs Regulate Nodule and Lateral Root Development in Legumes”

Flavonoids play a critical role during nodulation after the rhizobia have entered the roots. In determinate nodule producing plants such as soybean, and indeterminate nodule producing plants such as Medicago truncatula, different flavonoids have different functions.