1A,

MOTION FOR LEAVE TO INTERVENE OF
NORTHERN NATURAL GAS COMPANY,
TRANSWESTERN PIPELINE COMPANY,
FLORIDA GAS TRANSMISSION COMPANY, AND
ENRON GAS MARKETING, INC.

Pursuant to Rule 15(d) of the Federal Rules of Appellate Procedure, Northern Natural Gas Company ("Northern"), Transwestern Pipeline Company ("Transwestern"), Florida Gas Transmission Company ("Florida Gas"), and Enron Gas Marketing, Inc. ("EGM") (collectively referred to herein as "Enron") each hereby move for leave to intervene in the above-captioned proceeding. In support of its motion, Enron states as follows:

I.

Northern, Transwestern, and Florida Gas own and operate pipeline systems and facilities and perform natural gas transportation and sales services on behalf of numerous customers, and are each interstate pipelines subject to the jurisdiction of Respondent under the Natural Gas Act. Moreover, Northern, Transwestern, and Florida Gas participated in the Docket Nos. RM91-11-000 and RM87-34-065 proceedings and are each involved in restructuring proceedings dictated by Order Nos. 636, et seq.^{1/}

^{1/}Northern's restructuring proceeding is Docket No. RS92-8-000; Florida Gas' restructuring proceeding is Docket No. RS92-16-000; and Transwestern's restructuring proceeding is Docket No. RS92-87-000.

II.

EGM is a wholly-owned subsidiary of Enron Gas Services, Inc., a wholly-owned subsidiary of Enron Corp., and is affiliated with several pipelines, including Northern, Transwestern, and Florida Gas. EGM is a marketer of natural gas, selling in excess of 2 Bcf per day on both a spot and long-term basis. EGM obtains its supplies from virtually every major producing basin in the United States, as well as from Canada, and sells gas to markets located in 37 states. In a given month, EGM moves gas on approximately 100 pipelines.

EGM is a party in approximately 58 of the pipelines' restructuring proceedings required pursuant to Order Nos. 636, et seq., and EGM participated in the respective docket proceeding before the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission.

III.

On December 14, 1992 and January 4, 1993, January 4, 1993, and January 5, 1993, respectively, Virginia Electric and Power Company, Northern Indiana Public Service Company, Northern States Power Company (Minnesota), et al., and Midland Cogeneration Venture Limited Partnership petitioned this Court to review of the following Order of Respondent, Federal Energy Regulatory Commission:

Pipeline Service Obligations and Revisions to Regulations Governing Self-Implementing Transportation Under Part 284 of the Commission's Regulations and Regulation of Natural Gas Pipelines After Partial Wellhead Decontrol, Docket Nos. RM91-11-004 and RM87-34-069, Order No. 636-B, "Order Denying Rehearing and Clarifying Order Nos. 636 and 636-A", 61 FERC (CCH) ¶ 61,272 (November 27, 1992).

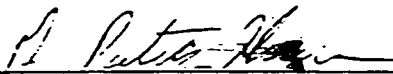

IV.

Enron has a substantial interest in this proceeding and may be directly and substantially affected by the outcome thereof and cannot be represented adequately by any other party. For these reasons, good cause exists to grant Enron's Motion to Intervene and to permit Enron's active participation in this proceeding.

WHEREFORE, for the reasons set forth herein, Enron respectfully moves to intervene in the above-captioned proceeding, and requests that it be accorded all rights as a full party to the proceeding.

Respectfully submitted,

No. 92-1643

MOTION FOR LEAVE TO INTERVENE OUT-OF-TIME OF
NORTHERN NATURAL GAS COMPANY,
TRANSWESTERN PIPELINE COMPANY,
FLORIDA GAS TRANSMISSION COMPANY, -AND
ENRON GAS MARKETING, INC.

Pursuant to Rule 15(d) of the Federal Rules of Appellate Procedure, Northern Natural Gas Company ("Northern"), Transwestern Pipeline Company ("Transwestern"), Florida Gas Transmission Company ("Florida Gas"), and Enron Gas Marketing, Inc. ("EGM") (collectively referred to herein as "Enron") each hereby move for leave to intervene out-of-time in the above-captioned proceeding. In support of its motion, Enron states as follows:

I.

Northern, Transwestern, and Florida Gas own and operate pipeline systems and facilities and perform natural gas transportation and sales services on behalf of numerous customers, and are each interstate pipelines subject to the jurisdiction of Respondent under the Natural Gas Act.

Moreover, Northern, Transwestern, and Florida Gas participated in the Docket Nos. RM91-11-000 and RM87-34-065 proceedings and are each involved in restructuring proceedings dictated by Order Nos. 636, et seq.¹¹

II.

EGM is a wholly-owned subsidiary of Enron Gas Services, Inc., a wholly-owned subsidiary of Enron Corp., and is affiliated with several pipelines, including Northern, Transwestern, and Florida Gas. EGM is a marketer of natural gas, selling in excess of 2 Bcf per day on both a spot and long-term basis. EGM obtains its supplies from virtually every major producing basin in the United States, as well as from Canada, and sells gas to markets located in 37 states. In a given month, EGM moves gas on approximately 100 pipelines.

EGM is a party in approximately 58 of the pipelines' restructuring proceedings required pursuant to Order Nos. 636, et seq., and EGM participated in the respective docket proceeding before the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission ("Commission").

¹¹Northern's restructuring proceeding is Docket No. RS92-8-000; Florida Gas' restructuring proceeding is Docket No. RS92-16-000; and Transwestern's restructuring proceeding is Docket No. RS92-87-000.

III.

On December 10, 1992, CNG Transmission Corporation petitioned this Court to review of the following Order of Respondent, Federal Energy Regulatory Commission:

Pipeline Service Obligations and Revisions to Regulations Governing Self-Implementing Transportation Under Part 284 of the Commission's Regulations and Regulation of Natural Gas Pipelines After Partial Wellhead Decontrol, Docket Nos. RM91-11-004 and RM87-34-069, Order No. 636-B, "Order Denying Rehearing and Clarifying Order Nos. 636 and 636-A", 61-FERC (CCH) ¶ 61,272 (November 27, 1992).

Northern, Transwestern, and Florida Gas were active parties in the proceedings before the Respondent, Commission, from which the Petitioner seeks review.

IV.

Enron has a substantial interest in this proceeding and may be directly and substantially affected by the outcome thereof and cannot be represented adequately by any other party. For these reasons, good cause exists to grant Enron's Motion to Intervene Out-of-Time and to permit Enron's active participation in this proceeding.

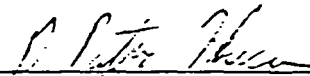

V.

Enron submits that good cause exists for the Commission to grant the instant motion for leave to file its intervention out-of-time. In performing the press of other business, the internal processing of the instant intervention was inadvertently delayed. Moreover, the instant filing is only three days out-of-time. Accordingly, by granting this motion, the Commission will not prejudice or increase the burdens placed on the existing parties, nor will Enron's motion cause a disruption to the Commission's proceeding. Enron will accept the record of proceedings developed prior to its intervention.

WHEREFORE, for the reasons set forth herein, Enron respectfully moves to intervene in the above-captioned proceeding, and requests that it be accorded all rights as a full party to the proceeding.

MOTION FOR LEAVE TO INTERVENE OF
NORTHERN NATURAL GAS COMPANY,
TRANSWESTERN PIPELINE COMPANY,
FLORIDA GAS TRANSMISSION COMPANY, AND
ENRON GAS MARKETING, INC.

Pursuant to Rule 15(d) of the Federal Rules of Appellate Procedure, Northern Natural Gas Company ("Northern"), Transwestern Pipeline Company ("Transwestern"), Florida Gas Transmission Company ("Florida Gas"), and Enron Gas Marketing, Inc. ("EGM") (collectively referred to herein as "Enron") each hereby move for leave to intervene in the above-captioned proceedings. In support of its motion, Enron states as follows:

I.

Northern, Transwestern, and Florida Gas own and operate pipeline systems and facilities and perform natural gas transportation and sales services on behalf of numerous customers, and are each interstate pipelines subject to the jurisdiction of Respondent under the Natural Gas Act. Moreover, Northern, Transwestern, and Florida Gas participated in the Docket Nos. RM91-11-000 and RM87-34-065 proceedings and are each involved in restructuring proceedings dictated by Order Nos. 636, et seq.¹¹

II.

EGM is a wholly-owned subsidiary of Enron Gas Services, Inc., a wholly-owned subsidiary of Enron Corp., and is affiliated with several pipelines, including Northern, Transwestern, and Florida Gas. EGM is a marketer of natural gas, selling in excess of 2 Bcf per day on both a spot and long-term basis. EGM obtains its supplies from virtually every major producing basin in the United States, as well as from Canada, and sells gas to markets located in 37 states. In a given month, EGM moves gas on approximately 100 pipelines.

¹¹Northern's restructuring proceeding is Docket No. RS92-8-000; Florida Gas' restructuring proceeding is Docket No. RS92-16-000; and Transwestern's restructuring proceeding is Docket No. RS92-87-000.

EGM is a party in approximately 58 of the pipelines' restructuring proceedings required pursuant to Order Nos. 636, et seq., and EGM participated in the respective docket proceeding before the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission.

III.

On December 17, 1992 and January 6, 1993, respectively, Citizens Gas & Coke Utility and National Association of Gas Consumers petitioned this Court for review of the following Orders of Respondent, Federal Energy Regulatory Commission:

1. Pipeline Service Obligations and Revisions to Regulations Governing Self-Implementing Transportation Under Part 284 of the Commission's Regulations and Regulation of Natural Gas Pipelines After Partial Wellhead Decontrol, Docket Nos. RM91-11-000 and RM87-34-065, Order No. 636, "Final Rule", FERC Stats. & Regs. (CCH) ¶ 30,939 (April 8, 1992);
2. Pipeline Service Obligations and Revisions to Regulations Governing Self-Implementing Transportation Under Part 284 of the Commission's Regulations and Regulation of Natural Gas Pipelines After Partial Wellhead Decontrol, Docket Nos. RM91-11-002 and RM87-34-068, Order No. 636-A, "Order Denying Rehearing in Part, Granting Rehearing in Part, and Clarifying Order No. 636", III FERC Stats. & Regs. (CCH) ¶ 30,950 (August 3, 1992); and
3. Pipeline Service Obligations and Revisions to Regulations Governing Self-Implementing Transportation Under Part 284 of the Commission's Regulations and Regulation of Natural Gas Pipelines After Partial Wellhead Decontrol, Docket Nos. RM91-11-004 and RM87-34-069, Order No. 636-B, "Order Denying Rehearing and Clarifying Order Nos. 636 and 636-A", 61 FERC (CCH) ¶ 61,272 (November 27, 1992).

IV.

Enron has a substantial interest in these proceedings and may be directly and substantially affected by the outcome thereof and cannot be represented adequately by any other party. For these reasons, good cause exists to grant Enron's Motion to Intervene and to permit Enron's active participation in these proceedings.

WHEREFORE, for the reasons set forth herein, Enron respectfully moves to intervene in the above-captioned proceedings, and requests that it be accorded all rights as a full party to the proceedings.

Respectfully submitted,

By G. Patrick Flowers

II. Motion for Leave to Intervene

Pursuant to Rule 15(d) of the Federal Rules of Appellate Procedure, Northern Natural Gas Company ("Northern"), Transwestern Pipeline Company ("Transwestern"), Florida Gas Transmission Company ("Florida Gas"), and Enron Gas Marketing, Inc. ("EGM") (collectively referred to herein as "Enron") each hereby move for leave to intervene in the above-captioned proceeding. In support of its motion, Enron states as follows:

I.

Northern, Transwestern, and Florida Gas own and operate pipeline systems and facilities and perform natural gas transportation and sales services on behalf of numerous customers, and are each interstate pipelines subject to the jurisdiction of Respondent under the Natural Gas Act. Moreover, Northern, Transwestern, and Florida Gas participated in the Docket Nos. RM91-11-000 and RM87-34-065 proceedings and are each involved in restructuring proceedings dictated by Order Nos. 636, et seq.^{1/}

II.

EGM is a wholly-owned subsidiary of Enron Gas Services, Inc., a wholly-owned subsidiary of Enron Corp., and is affiliated with several pipelines, including Northern,

^{1/}Northern's restructuring proceeding is Docket No. RS92-8-000; Florida Gas' restructuring proceeding is Docket No. RS92-16-000; and Transwestern's restructuring proceeding is Docket No. RS92-87-000.

Transwestern, and Florida Gas. EGM is a marketer of natural gas, selling in excess of 2 Bcf per day on both a spot and long-term basis. EGM obtains its supplies from virtually every major producing basin in the United States, as well as from Canada, and sells gas to markets located in 37 states. In a given month, EGM moves gas on approximately 100 pipelines.

EGM is a party in approximately 58 of the pipelines' restructuring proceedings required pursuant to Order Nos. 636, et seq., and EGM participated in the RM91-11-000 docket proceedings before the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission.

III.

By means of a Petition for Review dated December 29, 1992 and received by this Court on December 30, 1992, Process Gas Consumers Group, American Iron and Steel Institute and Georgia Industrial Group petitioned this Court to review the following Order of Respondent, Federal Energy Regulatory Commission:

Pipeline Service Obligations and Revisions to Regulations Governing Self-Implementing Transportation Under Part 284 of the Commission's Regulations, and Regulation of Natural Gas Pipelines After Partial Wellhead Decontrol, Docket Nos. RM91-11-004 and RM87-34-069, Order No. 636-B, "Order Denying Rehearing and Clarifying Order Nos. 636 and 636-A", 61 F.E.R.C. (CCH) ¶ 61,272 (November 27, 1992).

IV.

Enron has a substantial interest in this proceeding and may be directly and substantially affected by the outcome thereof and cannot be represented adequately by any other party. For these reasons, good cause exists to grant Enron's Motion to Intervene and to permit Enron's active participation in this proceeding. As of the date of filing of this Motion to Intervene, the issues in the captioned proceeding have yet to be definitively established. The status of Enron will depend upon the particular issue raised for judicial review.

WHEREFORE, for the reasons set forth herein, Enron respectfully moves to intervene in the above-captioned proceeding, and requests that it be accorded all rights as a full party to the proceeding.

Respectfully submitted,

By G. Patrick Flowers

II. Moticon for Leave to Intervene

Pursuant to Rule 15(d) of the Federal Rules of Appellate Procedure, Northern Natural Gas Company ("Northern"), Transwestern Pipeline Company ("Transwestern"), Florida Gas Transmission Company ("Florida Gas"), and Enron Gas Marketing, Inc. ("EGM") (collectively referred to herein as "Enron") each hereby move for leave to intervene in the above-captioned proceeding. In support of its motion, Enron states as follows:

I.

Northern, Transwestern, and Florida Gas own and operate pipeline systems and facilities and perform natural gas transportation and sales services on behalf of numerous customers, and are each interstate pipelines subject to the jurisdiction of Respondent under the Natural Gas Act. Moreover, Northern, Transwestern, and Florida Gas participated in the Docket Nos. RM91-11-000 and RM87-34-065 proceedings and are each involved in restructuring proceedings dictated by Order Nos. 636, et seq.^{1/}

II.

EGM is a wholly-owned subsidiary of Enron Gas Services, Inc., a wholly-owned subsidiary of Enron Corp., and is affiliated with several pipelines, including Northern,

^{1/}Northern's restructuring proceeding is Docket No. RS92-8-000; Florida Gas' restructuring proceeding is Docket No. RS92-16-000; and Transwestern's restructuring proceeding is Docket No. RS92-87-000.

Transwestern, and Florida Gas. EGM is a marketer of natural gas, selling in excess of 2 Bcf per day on both a spot and long-term basis. EGM obtains its supplies from virtually every major producing basin in the United States, as well as from Canada, and sells gas to markets located in 37 states. In a given month, EGM moves gas on approximately 100 pipelines.

EGM is a party in approximately 58 of the pipelines' restructuring proceedings required pursuant to Order Nos. 636, et seq., and EGM participated in the RM91-11-000 docket proceedings before the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission.

III.

On January 5, 1993, Atlanta Gas Light Company and Chattanooga Gas Company petitioned this Court to review the following Orders of Respondent, Federal Energy Regulatory Commission:

Pipeline Service Obligations and Revisions to Regulations Governing Self-Implementing Transportation Under Part 284 of the Commission's Regulations, and Regulation of Natural Gas Pipelines After Partial Wellhead Decontrol, Docket Nos. RM91-11-004 and RM87-34-069, Order No. 636-B, "Order Denying Rehearing and Clarifying Order Nos. 636 and 636-A", 61 F.E.R.C. (CCH) ¶ 61,272 (November 27, 1992).

IV.

Enron has a substantial interest in this proceeding and may be directly and substantially affected by the outcome thereof and cannot be represented adequately by any other party. For these reasons, good cause exists to grant Enron's

Motion to Intervene and to permit Enron's active participation in this proceeding. As of the date of filing of this Motion to Intervene, the issues in the captioned proceeding have yet to be definitively established. The status of Enron will depend upon the particular issue raised for judicial review.

WHEREFORE, for the reasons set forth herein, Enron respectfully moves to intervene in the above-captioned proceeding, and requests that it be accorded all rights as a full-party to the proceeding.

Respectfully submitted,

EGM is a party in approximately 58 of the pipelines' restructuring proceedings required pursuant to Order Nos. 636, et seq., and EGM participated in the respective docket proceedings before the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission.

III.

Tennessee Valley Municipal Gas Association (January 25, 1993) and East Tennessee Group (January 26, 1993) petitioned this Court to review of the following Orders of Respondent, Federal Energy Regulatory Commission:

1. Pipeline Service Obligations and Revisions to Regulations Governing Self-Implementing Transportation Under Part 284 of the Commission's Regulations and Regulation of Natural Gas Pipelines After Partial Wellhead Decontrol, Docket Nos. RM91-11-000 and RM87-34-065, Order No. 636, "Final Rule", FERC Stats. & Regs. (CCH) ¶ 30,939 (April 8, 1992);
2. 4. Pipeline Service Obligations and Revisions to Regulations Governing Self-Implementing Transportation Under Part 284 of the Commission's Regulations and Regulation of Natural Gas Pipelines After Partial Wellhead Decontrol, Docket Nos. RM91-11-005 and RM87-34-070, "Notice of Denial of Rehearing", 62 FERC ¶ 61,007 (January 8, 1993).

IV.

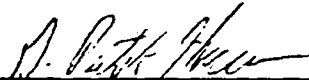

Enron has a substantial interest in these proceedings and may be directly and substantially affected by the outcome thereof and cannot be represented adequately by any other party. For these reasons, good cause exists to grant Enron's Motion to Intervene and to permit Enron's active participation in these proceedings.

WHEREFORE, for the reasons set forth herein, Enron respectfully moves to intervene in the above-captioned proceedings, and requests that it be accorded all rights as a full party to the proceedings.

MOTION FOR LEAVE TO INTERVENE OF
NORTHERN NATURAL GAS COMPANY,
TRANSWESTERN PIPELINE COMPANY,
FLORIDA GAS TRANSMISSION COMPANY, AND
ENRON GAS MARKETING, INC.

Pursuant to Rule 15(d) of the Federal Rules of Appellate Procedure, Northern Natural Gas Company ("Northern"), Transwestern Pipeline Company ("Transwestern"), Florida Gas Transmission Company ("Florida Gas"), and Enron Gas Marketing, Inc. ("EGM") (collectively referred to herein as "Enron") each hereby move for leave to intervene in the above-captioned proceeding. In support of its motion, Enron states as follows:

I.

Northern, Transwestern, and Florida Gas own and operate pipeline systems and facilities and perform natural gas transportation and sales services on behalf of numerous customers, and are each interstate pipelines subject to the jurisdiction of Respondent under the Natural Gas Act. Moreover, Northern, Transwestern, and Florida Gas participated in the Docket Nos. RM91-11-000 and RM87-34-065 proceedings and are each involved in restructuring proceedings dictated by Order Nos. 636, et seq.^{1/}

II.

EGM is a wholly-owned subsidiary of Enron Gas Services, Inc., a wholly-owned subsidiary of Enron Corp., and is affiliated with several pipelines, including Northern, Transwestern, and Florida Gas. EGM is a marketer of natural gas, selling in excess of 2 Bcf per day on both a spot and long-term basis. EGM obtains its supplies from virtually every major producing basin in the United States, as well as from Canada, and sells gas to markets located in 37 states. In a given month, EGM moves gas on approximately 100 pipelines.

EGM is a party in approximately 58 of the pipelines' restructuring proceedings required pursuant to Order Nos. 636, et seq., and EGM participated in the respective docket proceeding before the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission.

^{1/}Northern's restructuring proceeding is Docket No. RS92-8-000; Florida Gas' restructuring proceeding is Docket No. RS92-16-000; and Transwestern's restructuring proceeding is Docket No. RS92-87-000.

III.

On January 25, 1993, The Cincinnati Gas & Electric Company, the Union Light, Heat and Power Company, and Lawrenceburg Gas Company petitioned this Court to review of the following Orders of Respondent, Federal Energy Regulatory Commission:

1. Pipeline Service Obligations and Revisions to Regulations Governing Self-Implementing Transportation Under Part 284 of the Commission's Regulations and Regulation of Natural Gas Pipelines After Partial Wellhead Decontrol, Docket Nos. RM91-11-002 and RM87-34-068, Order No. 636-A, "Order Denying Rehearing in Part, Granting Rehearing in Part, and Clarifying Order No. 636", III FERC Stats. & Regs. (CCH) ¶ 30,950 (August 3, 1992); and
2. Pipeline Service Obligations and Revisions to Regulations Governing Self-Implementing Transportation Under Part 284 of the Commission's Regulations and Regulation of Natural Gas Pipelines After Partial Wellhead Decontrol, Docket Nos. RM91-11-004 and RM87-34-069, Order No. 636-B, "Order Denying Rehearing and Clarifying Order Nos. 636 and 636-A", 61 FERC (CCH) ¶ 61,272 (November 27, 1992)..

IV.

Enron has a substantial interest in this proceeding and may be directly and substantially affected by the outcome thereof and cannot be represented adequately by any other party. For these reasons, good cause exists to grant Enron's Motion to Intervene and to permit Enron's active participation in this proceeding.

WHEREFORE, for the reasons set forth herein, Enron respectfully moves to intervene in the above-captioned proceeding, and requests that it be accorded ~~all~~ rights as a full party to the proceeding.

CORPORATE DISCLOSURE STATEMENT OF
NORTHERN NATURAL GAS COMPANY,
TRANSWESTERN PIPELINE COMPANY,
FLORIDA GAS TRANSMISSION COMPANY, AND
ENRON GAS MARKETING, INC.

Pursuant to Rule 26.1 of the Federal Rules of Appellate Procedure and Local Rule 6A of the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit, Northern Natural Gas Company ("Northern"), Transwestern Pipeline Company ("Transwestern"), Florida Gas Transmission Company ("Florida Gas"), and Enron Gas Marketing, Inc. ("EGM") (herein collectively referred to as "Enron") hereby file this corporate disclosure statement.

Northern, Transwestern, and EGM are indirect wholly owned subsidiaries of Enron Corp., a publicly traded corporation. Florida Gas is a wholly owned subsidiary of Citrus Corp., which is fifty percent (50%) owned by Enron Corp. and fifty percent (50%) owned by Sonat, Inc., which is also a publicly traded corporation. Enron Corp. is affiliated with Enron Oil & Gas Company and Enron Liquids Pipeline, L.P., which are also publicly traded.

Northern, Transwestern, and Florida Gas are interstate pipelines subject to the jurisdiction of the Respondent under the Natural Gas Act. Northern, Transwestern, and Florida Gas own and operate pipeline systems and facilities and perform natural gas transportation and sales services on behalf of numerous customers. Moreover, Northern, Transwestern, and Florida Gas are impacted by Order Nos. 636, et seq.

EGM is a marketer of natural gas, selling in excess of 2 Bcf per day on both a spot and long-term basis. EGM obtains its supplies from virtually every major producing basin in the United States, as well as from Canada, and sells gas to markets located in 37 states. In a given month, EGM moves gas on approximately 100 pipelines. EGM is a party in approximately 58 of the pipelines' restructuring proceedings required pursuant to Order Nos. 636, et seq.

THE OUTLOOK FOR NATURAL GAS/TECHNOLOGY MARCHES ON

Enron Corp., the nation's largest natural gas company, has a unique vantage point from which to assess this country's natural gas resource base. The in-house expertise of this coast-to-coast and border-to-border exploration, production, transportation and marketing organization includes geologists, engineers, marketers and economists from numerous and diverse corporate entities. What began with a merger between an inter- and an intrastate pipeline company (InterNorth and Houston Natural Gas) has grown by regional acquisition and core business expansion. Looking analytically into the future with regard to the supply of and demand for natural gas, we have harnessed our collective expertise to develop an outlook for this economically efficient, environmentally benign, and intrinsically secure fuel of the future.

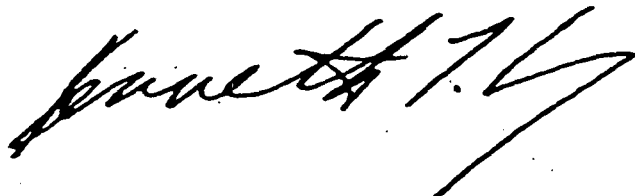

We see an economically recoverable natural gas resource base of 1,303 trillion cubic feet as of January 1, 1993. This includes the 158 Tcf of dry gas proved reserves that were booked into inventory by the industry at the beginning of 1992 and accounts for the 18 Tcf that were produced and replaced during 1992. We don't attach significance to the misleading 9-1/2 year "reserve life index" concept. That's accounting fiction. We utilize the 71 "resource life index" concept as being more appropriate for planning purposes.

Our resource view is somewhat larger than the recently released National Petroleum Council estimate of 1,295 Tcf as of January 1, 1991. While we're higher in some regions and lower in others, we agree completely with the NPC's bottom line assessment -- "Natural Gas is an abundant domestic resource and can be produced and delivered at prices that allow both expansion of market and continued development of the resource."

As explained in our Outlook, we see technology as the key explanatory variable for the progress we've observed to date and the advancements we anticipate for the future. If provisions for technological advancements are not incorporated into a resource assessment, the analysis will be self-committed to periodic, and inevitably upward, revision as time goes by. Failure to recognize the role of technology can also lead to periodic "policy panics," such as in the 70's when many in government concluded that we had to switch away from natural gas use.

I hope you will find our 1993 Outlook to be valuable and informative. We solicit your comments and ask that they be given to Bruce N. Stram, Vice President of Corporate Planning at (713) 853-1561.

Sincerely,

A

Dear Bill:

I enjoyed reading through your testimony before the Senate Energy and National Resources Committee hearing on the Pacific Rim nations. The overall statement was very impressive, but the statistics and projections on China were mind-boggling.

Bill, your statement just underscores the absolute necessity that the Administration handle the MFN situation very carefully. China is an enormous potential market for the United States and it would be very damaging both to us and to the world if we compromise our position in that market.

You continue to do a superb job and I'm delighted you are where you are.

Dear Rich:

In view of Secretary O'Leary's interest in increasing domestic oil and gas production, you may find the possible Minerals Management Service (MMS) decision to subject Section 29 credits to royalty payments detrimental to the Secretary's plan.

The attached brief is an explanation of why this proposal is senseless.

MMS could take action in the next several days. If you or your policy staff would like to discuss this matter further, please call me at 828-3366.

Dear Mr. Hillings:

This is in response to your letter of May 4, 1993, to Richard Rosenzweig concerning the proposal by the Department of the Interior's Minerals Management Service to include the Section 29 tax credit for natural gas in the valuation of gross proceeds for Federal royalty payment purposes.

The Department of Energy is reviewing this proposal. We plan to discuss the issue with the appropriate officials at the Minerals Management Service in the very near future.

We would be pleased to discuss this proposal further with you and your staff. Thank you for bringing this issue to our attention.

Hazel O'Leary
Department of Energy
1000 Independence Ave., S.W.
Washington, DC 20585

Dear Secretary O'Leary:

I am writing to follow-up on a recent conversation you had with Emil Pena of Arco in Louisiana. At that time, Emil extended to you an invitation on my behalf to come to Houston for a series of meetings with key energy industry executives. A second series of meetings would be held in Los Angeles. Enron and Arco could coordinate the activities.

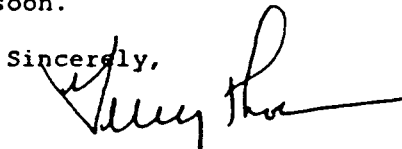

These meetings would provide a wonderful opportunity to (1) clarify the Clinton administration's energy agenda, and more importantly, (2) introduce Hazel O'Leary to a broad spectrum of energy executives. Quite frankly, you are an unknown quantity for many people in the industry and few are aware of the aggressive and innovative initiatives you are pursuing at DOE. There is no better way to gain support for the administration's policies and your initiatives than to open such a dialogue.

I would envision beginning the day with a breakfast meeting with ten to fifteen CEOs. We could then schedule for you a series of briefings on topics of special interest to you and your staff. These topics could range from recent developments in international gas fired electric generation to the latest technological developments in natural gas exploration. A luncheon speech to a much larger group and perhaps a press conference would end your visit to Houston. From there you would depart for LA.

Finally, we have not yet had the opportunity to meet. Before my recent promotion, I was President and CEO of Transwestern Pipeline Company, a strong supporter of Clinton and active in the campaign. I've worked for two decades on U.S. energy policy and can offer to you some unique perspectives on the "opportunities" you face at DOE. In the very near future, I would like to schedule a meeting.

I'm looking forward to meeting you soon.

Sincerely,

Terry Thorn

Please accept my sincere congratulations for your confirmation as Deputy Secretary of Energy. You are exactly the type of dynamic, hard-charging person we need in federal government today. All of us in the natural gas industry look forward to dealing with you in your new position and wish you a most successful tenure. I know you will enjoy the challenges you will confront over the next few years.

Again, my congratulations and best wishes in your new position.

Dear Mr. White:

Enron LNG and Palmco (a Korean owned, United States based trading company) recently met with officials of the Sakhalin Islands to present a major project proposal in what has been referred to until now as the 4/M project.

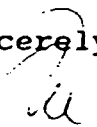

I have been advised that, following our presentation, the Sakhalin Government was persuaded to recommend that other foreign bidders should be included in the negotiation process.

Since President Clinton shortly will be visiting Seoul, Korea, information that Enron LNG and Palmco are teamed in a competitive bid proposal for the Sakhalin Islands Project could be raised at one of his meetings. It would be a good example of the two nations working together. (Should you need more specific information, please feel free to give me a call).

Mr. Howard Martin, President of Enron LNG will be here in Washington on July 14th and 15th and would like to brief you (or your representative) on the details of our proposal.

I will call your office to arrange an appointment.

Dear Mr. Lay:

I am pleased that you are participating in this Friday's Domestic Energy Initiative Roundtable. In my previous letter, I promised to send you a summary of the recommendations and concerns expressed in previous meetings.

We have heard from a wide range of parties with an interest in the future of the U.S. oil and natural gas industries. In the past three months, 14 meetings have been held in five locations, with a total of 148 participants providing recommendations. These speakers represented companies, associations, States, and consumer groups directly involved in the future of the domestic industry. Ten Federal Agencies were represented at the meetings.

A summary of the themes we have been hearing is enclosed.

Sincerely,

Dear Secretary O'Leary:

In the next few days, senior officials of the Government of India will be visiting Washington to participate in a variety of meetings. These officials are the Minister of Finance, Dr. Manmohan Singh, and the Minister of Power, N.K.P. Salve.

Enron is pursuing major opportunities in India for which the Government of India is close to a decision. Enron's projects represent major investments in India using American-manufactured equipment and services. It is a win-win situation for both countries.

Panna-Mukta oil and gas field and the Tapti gas field - Enron Oil and Gas Company and its Indian partner, Reliance Industries, Inc., have bid to develop these fields. The oil and gas produced would be used for domestic purposes for clean energy and industrial products (petrochemicals, etc.).

Status: Prime Minister Rao, Finance Minister Singh and Petroleum Minister Sharma are in the process of deciding who will negotiate with the Government of India. Our leading competitors are Hyundai and BHP.

Value: $500 million.

Dabhol Power Project - This is a 2015 MW combined cycle power station which will provide power to the Maharashtra State Electricity Board. Enron Power's partners in this build-own-operate facility are Bechtel and G.E.

Status: State of Maharashtra Cabinet approved development on September 14, 1993. The next action will be taken by Government of India Power Minister Salve Value: Approximately $2.5 billion for the power station. Partners are Bechtel and General Electric.

We are vigorously pursuing these projects which will result in the largest United States investment in India currently.

Should you have an occasion to visit with these officials in the next few days, it would be helpful to have U.S. government's interest expressed to them.

Please feel free to contact me if you want further details on the project or if you have suggestions and information helpful to this effort which will produce sound results for both nations.

The Honorable Hazel O'Leary
Secretary of Energy
U.S. Department of Energy
1000 Independence Avenue, N.W.
Washington, D.C. 20585

Dear Secretary O'Leary:

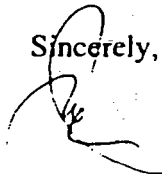

President Kirsan Ilumzhinov of Kalmykia (an independent republic in the southern part of the Russian Federation, roughly the same size as the Republic of Georgia, and bordering the Caspian Sea) will be visiting Washington, D.C. between October 19 and 25, 1993. We would like, if at all possible, to arrange an opportunity for him to meet with you.

President Ilumzhinov speaks fluent English, and has become a leading representative of the heads of the autonomous regions within Russia. As the crisis in Moscow has heightened, the regions have become increasingly involved and increasingly important as a factor in the balance of power. Meeting with President Ilumzhinov would thus afford a unique opportunity to obtain in depth and timely information about the situation in Russia, from a perspective not normally available.

Although we realize that much of your time and priority of focus is occupied with major domestic issues, we understand that you are also quite interested in Russia issues. Furthermore, as you are well known in Russia for your role in the U.S. Congress, President Ilumzhinov has expressed a particular interest in meeting with you if possible.

Attached is a fact sheet and several recent news articles about President Ilumzhinov and the Republic of Kalmykia. Linda Powers and I will call your office shortly to follow up on this request.

Sincerely,

E. Joseph Hillings

FACT SHEET: PRESIDENT ILMZHINOV AND REPUBLIC OF KALMYKIA

The Republic of Kalmykia is an independent republic in the southern part of the Russian Federation, bordering on the Caspian Sea. It is roughly the same size as the Republic of Georgia. Its President, Kirsan Ilumzhinov, was elected in open democratic elections last spring.

President Kirsan Ilumzhinov has become well known throughout Russia because he is young (in his early thirties), has made a personal fortune of several hundred million dollars through commodity trading over the last four years, and was elected in a landslide based on his plan to develop Kalmykia's resources and turn Kalmykia into an industrial and banking zone.

President Ilumzhinov and other regional leaders are playing an increasing role in the course of Russian politics. The views of regional leaders have become more significant as the confrontation between Yeltsin and the former Russian Parliament has heightened. In addition, the draft Constitution proposed by Yeltsin would create a strong formal role for the regions in the new Parliament.

The Republic of Kalmykia in particular has the potential to become an important model -- precisely the type of "success story" that both Yeltsin and the West need to shore up ongoing support for reform. Kalmykia is much like the rest of Russia in that it has rich resources (oil and gas, minerals, fish, caviar, etc.), but has not effectively developed these resources, has been dependent on heavy subsidies from Moscow, and has had a burdensome state apparatus and legislature full of old Communists. However, since the spring election, Kalmykia has also succeeded in taking several critical steps that the rest of Russia has not:

- Kalmykia recently became the first (and only) part of Russia to formally adopt the kind of Commercial Code (based substantially on the U.S. Uniform Commercial Code) that Western businesses have been pressing for. Although this Code was drafted by a Russian Government task force, no other part of Russia has made noticeable progress toward adoption.
- Kalmykia is also leading the way in Russia on other aspects of legal reform: developing an overall legal system and court system that is compatible with Western legal and judicial concepts, and that may develop into a center for commercial and other dispute resolution for all of Russia.
- The former Kalmykia Parliament and most of the former bureaucrats have been persuaded to resign voluntarily, the number of ministries has been reduced from forty to five, and the former KGB there has been disbanded -- thereby removing the major obstacles impeding economic reform and development elsewhere in Russia.
- Kalmykia, unlike other areas, is in negotiations with Moscow to cease receiving subsidies from the central government. In return, Kalmykia is seeking reduction of tax remittances to Moscow, which would enable Kalmykia to sharply reduce (and stabilize) tax rates in its region. This would remove the serious tax uncertainties and difficulties

Western businesses have been encountering in potential commercial opportunities in Russia.

- Also unlike other areas of Russia, Kalmykia has been taking several further concrete steps to improve the business climate, such as establishment of a six-day work week, increased education, and raising of public awareness about Western concepts of effective job performance.

Finally, Kalmykia's economic development plans create substantial commercial opportunities for U.S. firms. The plans call for establishment of substantial new industrial capacity -- particularly for the processing of raw materials into finished goods -- as well as for oil and gas and infrastructure development, requiring considerable equipment and technology in sectors where the U.S. has competitive strength. Kalmykia can also generate the capacity to pay for these things in the near term through sales of commodities in world markets.

For these reasons, we think it would be interesting and useful for President Ilumzhinov to have a chance to meet with you. I will contact your office to follow up on this suggestion, and hope that your schedule will allow for such a meeting. (For further background information, please see the recent news articles enclosed.)

ACTING BOLDLY IN THE PROVINCES

The new face of Russian politics

Kirsan Ilyumzhinov may have been elected president of Kalmykia because he promised every voter $100. Or maybe it was because candidate Ilyumzhinov used his own money to subsidize bread and milk prices. Or perhaps it was his slogan: "A rich president cannot be bought." But if Ilyumzhinov's methods were crude and his campaign promises flimsy, he has not disappointed the citizens of the Kalmyk Republic.

"Buddha called the president," says Tsaren Balzanov, a sports trainer who like most Kalmyks is a Buddhist. "We have a superforce called Ilyumzhinov. What he does is the will of the heavens." Others cite this year's bumper crop of 800,000 tons of grain, twice the normal yield, and the victory of a local boxer in a European championship as signs that the election of the 31-year-old millionaire marks the dawn of a new era in this sleepy republic, situated on the Russian steppes near the Volga River 700 miles south of Moscow.

Looking slick. Ilyumzhinov doesn't mind being thought of as a good-luck charm. In fact, he encourages a cult of personality: Most public places in Elista, the republic's capital, display a calendar showing him looking slick in a black shirt. "It is good when people have a dream and they believe in this dream," he says of himself. "They see a man who can do things. They see a man who finished school here. They see a man who could make himself rich and who will be able to make money for them."

and the parliament, Kalmykia's president and some other regional leaders have acted boldly. Ilyumzhinov disposed of the local Supreme Soviet in one fell swoop, telling depu-

Calendar boy. Ilyumzhinov's picture is everywhere in Kalmykia.

The center of gravity in Russian politics is shifting from Moscow to the provinces. Leaders like Ilyumzhinov already wield more clout than Boris Yeltsin, and Yeltsin's plan for a new parliament with a strong regional component will further decentralize power. Cities such as Nizhni Novgorod in central Russia's industrial belt may elect more reform-minded politicians, but other areas may go for conservative, law-and-order candidates.

While Moscow has remained paralyzed by the power struggle between Yeltsin ties he would reward them with good private-sector jobs if they went quietly. He dissolved the Council of Ministers, retaining only four key portfolios. He disbanded the local KGB but shrewdly invited its chief to become his personal bodyguard — with a raise in salary.

The normally loquacious leader is noncommittal about Yeltsin's recent moves to consolidate his power. But he makes no bones about the agenda of the regions. "Of course the regions are trying to secede," he says with a sigh. "They don't see any real power in Moscow. They want to solve their problems by themselves. They see people in Moscow are only involved in fights and arguments." Still, he is no secessionist. He thinks the draft Russian constitution grants the regions too much sovereignty and self-determination. "It is just a form of nationalism that will push regions away from each other," he says.

A self-described capitalist who made a fortune in casinos, banks and trade, Ilyumzhinov has pledged to build plants to process the republic's plentiful supplies of oil, gypsum, meat and leather. Bordering the Caspian Sea, Kalmykia also has caviar and fish to sell on world markets. But so far, Ilyumzhinov's promised economic revival hasn't materialized. At a meat-processing plant in Elista, the water has been cut off for more than a month. Workers slaughter the animals anyway; otherwise they won't get paid.

Ilyumzhinov's flair for self-promotion upsets many first-wave democrats in Russia, who came to politics with somber, cloth-cap sensibilities. But his victory last April against two better-known candidates shows that money, charisma and chicken-in-every-pot promises are more appealing to Russian ears than calls to sacrifice or old ideological trumpets.

Rich Southern Russian Leader Puts Region on Corporate Path

By Fred Hiatt
Washington Post Foreign Service

MOSCOW—Forget those has-been politicians Gorbachev and Yeltsin. The former Soviet Union has its first truly capitalist president, a 31-year-old businessman who campaigned from a stretch Lincoln limo, promised $100 out of his own pocket to every citizen and sold himself with the slogan, "A Rich President Cannot Be Bought."

He is Kirsan Ilyumzhinov, a slender onetime chess champion who made a fortune trading raw materials in the wreckage of communism. His domain is Kalmykia, one of Russia's 21 autonomous republics, a swath of steppe somewhere between an overgrown sheep farm and an independent state that bills itself as Europe's only Buddhist nation.

Elected in a landslide as Kalmykia's first president, Ilyumzhinov plans to turn his republic into a corporation, with every resident a shareholder and himself the unquestioned CEO. Within a week of his April 11 victory, he had persuaded the parliament and all political parties to disband by offering low-cost loans to rival politicians. The central bank chairman, he said, "is my chief accountant."

"Politics is just business," Ilyumzhinov said during an interview in Moscow last week. "I'm not a democrat. I'm not a dictator. I'm just a man who wants to help humanity."

Kalmykia, perched on the north-west Caspian Sea coast and slightly larger than West Virginia, is home to 2.8 million sheep but only 322,000 people, barely the number

Russian Republic Has a Capitalist President in one Moscow neighborhood. But, as Russia and its regions cast about desperately for a way out of poverty and economic decline, Ilyumzhinov already has attracted enormous attention in Russia and the West for his promise to turn his republic into an oasis of capitalism and prosperity.

Whether Ilyumzhinov can make good on his promise to improve living conditions within two years remains to be seen. Most residents of Kalmykia are poor, and the region, while possessing some reserves of gas and oil, has long depended on subsidies from Moscow.

Moreover, many of the new president's ideas seem somewhat quixotic. He speaks of turning Kalmykia into the banking Switzerland of the former Soviet Union, of offshore free-trade zones and new oil-processing plants. He has invited Tibet's exiled Dalai Lama to make Kalmykia his home away from home. He promises churches and golden Buddhas.

Yet as a phenomenon and symbol of the post-Soviet world, Ilyumzhinov cannot be dismissed. He has seized Russians' imagination in part because he seems to have succeeded where their president, Boris Yeltsin, is still struggling—in the battle against the entrenched communist-era elite.

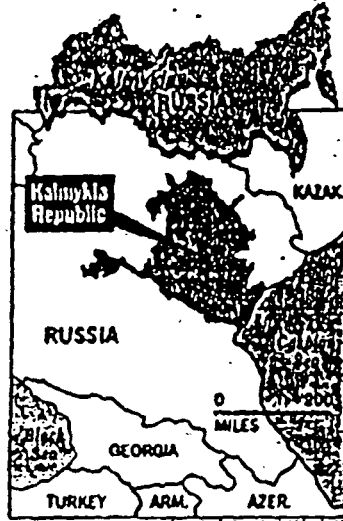

"What Yeltsin could not do in three years, I managed in a week," said Ilyumzhinov. "I brought an end to Soviet power."

The new president was speaking in his Moscow office, a small room in the Rossiya Hotel. A photo of the Dalai Lama was propped atop the Goldstar television. A cellular telephone sat at his side.

With a shy smile and soft voice, Ilyumzhinov has an engaging ability to speak immodestly while still seeming somewhat vulnerable. At his inauguration, heavy with Buddhist and Orthodox symbolism, grandmothers fretted over the young man, asking, "Why are you so thin?"

But so far, Ilyumzhinov seems more than ready to play with the big boys. When he took office, he couldn't even find a blank sheet of paper on which to write his first decree—"They had stolen everything," he said—yet he quickly persuaded the 400-member parliament to disband. Within two months, elections are to be held for a new, 25-member legislature.

Ilyumzhinov reduced the number of local ministries to five from 40, liquidating the local KGB. He also eliminated the republic's privatization committee and unworked local Kalmykia is home to 50 nationalities, with 45 percent of its population Kalmyk and 37 percent Russian. But, declared Ilyumzhinov, "we don't have a nationalities problem, and we're not going to have one." And with that, he liquidated the committee on nationalities too.

Last week, Ilyumzhinov reestablished a leaner KGB, this time to go after what he said were economic crimes committed by the old communist elite. He said factory directors "privatized" state assets at criminally low prices, and he is determined to get them back.

"I'm taking one step backward, to state capitalism, trying to gather everything under my roof," he explained. "Then I'll distribute everything to the people."

But Ilyumzhinov said he has no desire to put the greedy factory directors in jail. "You should never corner a wolf," he said. "Let them return the property and then go with God."

Ilyumzhinov's mixture of populism and jaunty capitalism, along with a certain mystery about the source and extent of his wealth, has brought him enemies and critics. One politician who campaigned against him charged with some detail that Ilyumzhinov amassed his fortune by misusing state credits and diverting state resources.

The president shrugs aside most questions about the size of his wealth, saying he does not have time to count it, but he denies any impropriety. He said his finances were inspected and investigated 37 times during the election campaign, by tax inspectors, the KGB and domestic intelligence agencies.

"I'm no idiot," he said. "If I had some dirty dealings, I wouldn't hold myself up as a target for journalists and everyone else. I'm not a candidate for suicide."

making money is no big deal. "Put me in America with nothing, and I'd be a millionaire within a year," he said.

Ilyumzhinov's background mirrors that of his people. His ancestors were nomads, probably from Mongolia, who settled in the Caucasus about 400 years ago. Some entered the service of the czar as Cossacks and converted to the Orthodox faith. Most retained their Buddhism, as well as their language, which is related to Mongolian.

Ilyumzhinov's grandfather was a Bolshevik hero of the 1917 Revolution. A street is named in his honor in Elista, the Kalmyk capital. "People say my grandfather built Soviet power, and now I'm dismantling it," the grandson said.

But, appalled by the Bolsheviks' methods of enforcing their rule, the grandfather took his life in 1920, Ilyumzhinov said. The commissar's suicide foreshadowed tragedies to come. Joseph Stalin deported the Kalmyks to Siberia in 1943 as part of the dictator's campaign of terror against his people. About half the deported Kalmyks lost their lives to starvation and cold during the forced exodus.

Ilyumzhinov's father worked as a Siberian woodcutter until 1958, when Soviet leader Nikita Khrushchev allowed the Kalmyks to return to their homeland. Even then, life was difficult. They had been barred from speaking their language or practicing their religion, and the Russians who had occupied their homes still regarded them as enemies of the people.

Ilyumzhinov grew up in Elista, became a local chess champion and won a place in a prestigious Moscow institute. After graduating, he said, he realized that independence could only be found through business.

Now, he said, he wants independence, or at least self-respect, for Kalmykia. He has said he will refuse subsidies from Moscow, if in return he can stop remitting most taxes. He wants foreign investment but not foreign aid—not even from "the Kalmyk diaspora," which he said is concentrated in New Jersey.

Ilyumzhinov derided Yeltsin, saying, "He will always have the mentality of a regional party secretary." Russia, he said, needs people like himself, "who have made money with their own hands and brains, who know the value of the dollar and the ruble." But even he, Ilyumzhinov said, is a transitional figure.

"Maybe Yeltsin is for yesterday, and I am for today," he said. "But by

Japan Confronts Death of Soldier In Cambodia

By Jacob M. Schlesinger
Staff Reporter of THE WALL STREET JOURNAL

TOKYO — A Japanese member of the United Nations peacekeeping force in Cambodia was killed in an ambush, igniting the wrenching Japanese national debate over whether this nation, with its militaristic past, should have soldiers abroad at all.

The civilian policeman who died had been dispatched to Cambodia with Japanese military, the first Japanese ground troops sent abroad since World War II. Four other Japanese policemen were injured, two critically.

Five Dutch marines also were wounded in the ambush, which a U.N. spokesman said was carried out by Khmer Rouge guerrillas in northwest Cambodia. The communist Khmer Rouge is attempting to abort a national election scheduled for May 23-28. The U.N. has a 22,000-member multinational peacekeeping force in Cambodia under terms of a U.N.-brokered peace pact; more than a dozen have been killed in Khmer Rouge attacks in the past six weeks, though yesterday's incident was the most serious.

In Japan, word of the attack gripped the country and dominated late night newscasts. The death of the policeman marks a turning point in Japan's attempts to find a diplomatic role that matches its international economic might. Japan sent forces to join the peacekeeping effort in Cambodia, but with clear restrictions, notably that they wouldn't be placed in combat situations. Now Tokyo must decide whether to keep its troops in the unstable nation or pull them out.

Western nations have praised Japan for shaking its postwar pacifism and agreeing to risk Japanese lives to help maintain stability in trouble spots around the world. They see a retreat from the U.N. mission in Cambodia would once again trigger criticism that Japan relies on "checkbook diplomacy" — providing financial support for multilateral missions while other nations spill blood.

At the same time, critics at home and across Asia remember World War II and worry that Japan is violating its own constitutional restrictions by dispatching soldiers to Cambodia, a dangerous precedent in their minds. When Japan's parliament last year passed the controversial law permitting troops to go abroad, it restricted the military to countries where a cease-fire is in effect. That's a dubious notion in Cambodia now that the Khmer Rouge is stepping up attacks to sabotage this month's elections.

Flashy President of Russia's Kalmyks Preaches Wolfish Virtues to Shepherds

By NEELA BANERJEE
Staff Reporter of THE WALL STREET JOURNAL

ELISTA, Russia — Kirsan Nikolayevich Ilyumzhinov, a multimillionaire businessman, campaigned for president of the tiny Russian republic of Kalmykia in a 30-foot Lincoln limousine.

His assistants feared that the display of wealth would turn off local citizens, many of whom are poor shepherds. But, ignoring their objections, the 31-year-old Mr. Ilyumzhinov set out along Kalmykia's few paved roads to win the votes of collective farmers and factory workers who watched dumbfounded as the stretch limo pulled into their muddy yards.

Kirsan Ilyumzhinov

"They'd seen limos only in American movies," Mr. Ilyumzhinov says. "I want to show kids, especially, that they don't have to dream about riding a limo in New York. They can have one here."

The car drew the kids, and Mr. Ilyumzhinov got their parents' votes.

A descendant of a Bolshevik commissar and a former Communist Party member himself, Mr. Ilyumzhinov has a taste for grand gestures. He sports elegant Western suits, hobnobs with European magnates and buys diamond-studded crowns that he delegates to a safe in Switzerland.

Following his landslide victory, Mr. Ilyumzhinov is now remaking downtrodden Kalmykia in his own image. Only days into his term, he has moved to establish a capitalist "economic dictatorship" that includes abolishing the pesky local legislature and most taxes.

"We don't have the republic of Kalmykia any more," Mr. Ilyumzhinov says. "Now there will be the corporation of Kalmykia."

Rolling the Dice

The power struggle in Moscow between President Boris Yeltsin and the conservative Russian Parliament has had odd repercussions in the provinces. Disillusioned with politics as usual, citizens in remote regions are turning to politicians who stand for change. That includes anyone from unrepentant Communists to, in Kalmykia, an unabashed capitalist.

The young tycoon has a murky financial past and some wild ideas, but Kalmyks figure only time will tell if he is a visionary or a con man.

"The people are always ready to believe in someone," says Alexander Tepkin, head of the local television station. "They figure, if he's lying, they can always beat him up. And if not, they might actually get something out of it."

If they do, it would be a bright spot in the Kalmyks' gloomy history. Descendants of tribes driven from western Mongolia by the Chinese, the Kalmyks settled on the steppe north of the Caucasus mountains 400 years ago. Valued for their soldiery during the Russian empire, the Kalmyks were decimated under Stalin, who exiled the whole population to Siberia during World War II. There, they died by the thousands.

The Kalmyks returned in 1958 to their unforgiving land, where sandstorms batter the treeless prairie from April to October. Little grows in the salty soil. Kalmykia remains part of Russia, but Moscow all but ignores the republic's industry.

"I'm totally for Kirsan Nikolayevich. He's the 100-to-1 shot we have of saving ourselves," says Viktor Manzhayev, a shepherd bringing in his herd from the steppe at day's end.

As a candidate, Mr. Ilyumzhinov told his 350,000 fellow citizens that rich is good. He peppered his campaign with spectacle and lavish promises. He brought Russian rock stars to this outpost 1,000 miles from Moscow, which was more accustomed to show business has-beens, and he promised appearances by Madonna and Michael Jackson upon election. (So far, no show.) He recently bought a diamond-encrusted crown from world chess champion Gary Kasparov, who is using the proceeds to help Armenian refugees.

A Buddhist like most Kalmyks, Mr. Ilyumzhinov has pledged to give the Dalai Lama asylum and land where he can build a Buddhist center "along the lines of Vatican City," he says. The Dalai Lama has been to Kalmykia twice, but hasn't taken up Mr. Ilyumzhinov's offer.

Monage is stepping up attacks to sabotage this month's elections.

German Economic Groups See Need to Cut Interest Rates to Avert Recession

By THOMAS ROTI

FRANKFURT — A report by leading German economic institutes criticized Bonn's tax plans and urged the central bank to accelerate interest-rate reductions to head off a broadening recession.

Clanking with escalating strikes in eastern Germany and a government announcement that western German output fell again in March, the institutes' joint spring analysis added to the country's darkening economic outlook. The institutes warned that delays in bringing down Germany's high short-term interest rates could prolong the decline in economic output and cause more unemployment. The result, they said, would continue to discourage industry investment, jeopardizing both united Germany's industrial restructuring and the nation's appeal for foreign investors.

Responding to Bundesbank

Contesting concerns by the Bundesbank, the central bank, that deep rate cuts could weaken the German mark, the six institutes argued that other countries in Europe would quickly follow German interest-rate reductions, thus neutralizing the effect on the mark.

The Economics Ministry said western German industrial production fell by an inflation and seasonally adjusted 0.5% in March from a revised February figure. Output also was off 10.5% from March 1992. The monthly decline in February, originally put at 1%, was revised to show output shrinking 1.3% from January. In a two-month comparison, western German production in the February-March period was off 2% from December-January, falling 10.7% from a year earlier.

The institutes predicted a 2% decline in western Germany's gross domestic product this year and a 1.5% decline in all of Germany, which could show an average jobless rate of 9.2% after 7.5% in 1992.

Eastern Economy Is 'Critical'

The institutes also criticized the Bonn government's recent plan to shore up public deficits and help finance German unity. Instead of spending cuts, the government set 60 billion marks ($38 billion) in new taxes by 1995.

Eastern Germany's economy was seen growing 1.5%, below Bonn's hope for a faster recovery there, as western Germany's recession delays investment in the east. The eastern economy, which still isn't self-sustaining, remains in a "critical" state, the institutes said.

Economic analysts believe that even 5.5% growth in eastern Germany is doubtful as the IG Metall union broods its strikes to back demands for a 26% pay increase for 400,000 members in the engineering and electrical industries. Although wage negotiators resumed meeting in Dresden yesterday, they aren't expected to find a quick solution. The union launched full-scale walkouts at 24 factories in the state of Saxony on Monday, including Volkswagen AG's Mosel plant. Strikes have spread to an additional 24 factories in the northern state of Mecklenburg-Vorpommern.

The institutes that participated in the report are: the Ifo Institute for Economic Research in Munich, the German Institute for Economic Research in Berlin, the HWWA Institute for Economic Research in Hamburg, the World Economic Institute in Kiel, the Rheinland-Westphalia Institute for Economic Research in Essen, and the Institute for Economic Research in Halle in eastern Germany.

Acer Inc.

Taiwan PC Manufacturer Swings to Profit for 1992

Acer Inc., Taiwan's largest personal computer maker, said its 1992 pre-tax profit was 66 million New Taiwan dollars (US$2 million), swinging from a loss of NT$607 million a year earlier.

Stan Shih, Acer's chairman and chief executive, attributed Acer's profit growth to the improved performance of its U.S. subsidiaries. He said the U.S. units narrowed their losses to about NT$500 million in 1992 from about NT$900 million in 1991. Sales edged up 0.8% to NT$12.2 billion.

In the past 2 1/2 years, Acer and Texas Instruments Inc. have invested NT$3.1 billion (with Acer holding a 58% stake) to set up a joint venture, TI-Acer Inc., to produce DRAM chips. The investment in the project was one of the main reasons for Acer's having posted losses the previous year. TI-Acer's plant was completed and started test production in February 1992.

Vatican City, he says. The Dalai Lama has been to Kalmykia twice, but hasn't taken up Mr. Ilyumzhinov's offer.

In March, Mr. Ilyumzhinov subsidized the republic's milk and bread prices. He also promised $100 for every family and a new Mercedes to every fourth family.

"I think he meant the Mercedes part metaphorically," says Mr. Tupikin, the TV station chief. "And he has said that the $100 won't come immediately, but through investment."

Always on the Move

The hyperactive Mr. Ilyumzhinov, who says he sleeps only three hours a night, crisscrossed the republic meeting voters, a practice unheard of in Russia. He billeted Kalmykia with slick brochures and full-color posters that say, "Kirsan Ilyumzhinov - Incorruptible Authority."

"No one can buy me because no one has as much money as I," Mr. Ilyumzhinov says, a gold tooth twinkling as he smiles. He adds, with pride, "The poor said, 'Let Kirsan be president. He needs nothing more than Kalmykia's prosperity.'"

Once elected, Mr. Ilyumzhinov thanked voters by distributing free calendars - of himself.

Mr. Ilyumzhinov was elected to the Russian Congress of People's Deputies in 1990. He quickly grew disillusioned with it and formed his own company. San. Three years later, Mr. Ilyumzhinov owns a conglomerate of more than 50 companies. "I have so many I lose track," he says. He has traveled the globe and holds U.S. and Swiss bank accounts.

Mr. Ilyumzhinov won't say how he made his first million. His companies, ranging from textiles to cartoon production, have been investigated 34 times by the KGB, the tax inspectorate and other ministries, none of whom uncovered anything, he says. "Let everyone also work 20 hours a day for three years straight, and they'd have a lot of money, too," he says.

To jump-start the Kalmyk economy, Mr. Ilyumzhinov plans to get rid of most bureaucrats, including the security ministry, local governing councils and the legislature. He plans to impose a corporate state administration. He's negotiating with Moscow to have Kalmykia declared an "offshore zone" with only a 3% tax on profits, as opposed to the countrywide 70% cumulative tax rate. In return, Kalmykia will repay budget allocations from Moscow, with interest.

Mr. Ilyumzhinov is tapping his millionaire friends overseas for investment. At Mr. Ilyumzhinov's inauguration, French caviar mogul Christian Petrossian said he was exploring caviar processing on Kalmykia's Caspian Sea coast. Kalmyk officials say the republic sits on a vast reservoir of oil, and Mr. Ilyumzhinov says he wants to develop it. He predicts the Kalmyk economy will be on the upswing by 1995.

"Kalmykia shouldn't wait with its hand outstretched for help from Moscow," Mr. Ilyumzhinov says. "No one can help Kalmykia but Kalmyks themselves, and the president's responsibility is to establish the conditions to do this. But even a man who claims never to have failed understands the dangers of his

he former leader of the Communist Youth League in Elista, the capital of Kalmykiya, is in no way perturbed when, at business receptions and during interviews, he is compared to American presidential candidate Ross Perot, or Poland's Stanislaw

Tyminski. On the contrary, he adds, modestly, that, unlike these two famous personalities, he managed to win his election.

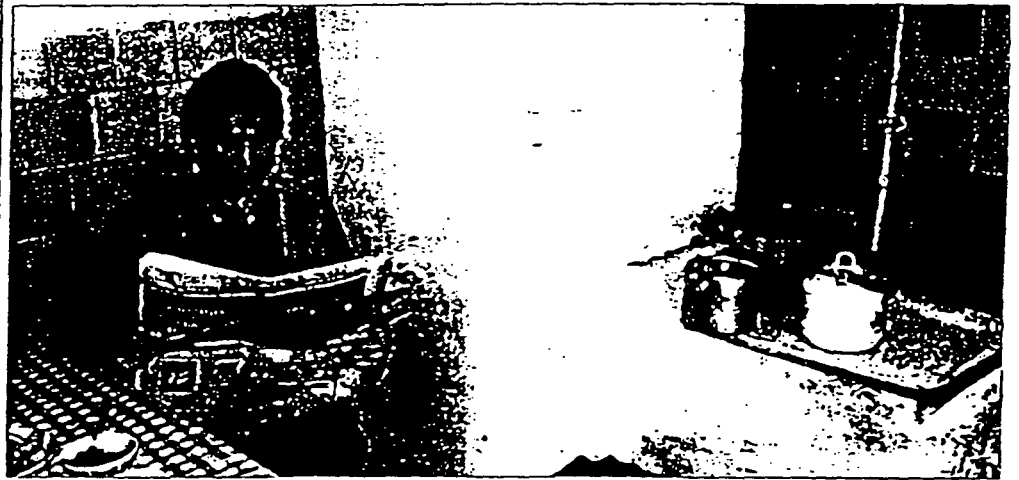

"I can survive without Kalmykiya," he comments, with the quiet, educated tone that befits a graduate of the Moscow State Institute of International Relations, "but Kalmykiya cannot survive without me." As he explains his plans for restructuring the republic, which has a population of 320,000, Mr Ilumzhinov casts an occasional satisfied glance at the bronze statue of Buddha in his room, or at the portrait of the Dalai Lama on the shelf beneath his mirror, which is cluttered with large bottles of expensive eau-de-Cologne.

"My first presidential decree will be to give the monasteries their land back," says Mr Ilumzhinov, outlining his plans to create a Lamaist state within Kalmykiya along similar lines to the Vatican in Rome. "I hope to invite the Dalai Lama to our republic and to offer him political asylum and land."

"With my second decree I plan to abolish the Ministry of Security," he adds, on the eve of his meeting with Russian security minister Viktor Barranikov. "The KGB is obsolete in the steppes of Kalmykiya." Mr Ilumzhinov gestures with his hands to indicate the enormous padlock he intends to use for this purpose, bowing politely as he does so. The menacing gesture concealed behind the polite bow betrays the fact that Mr Ilumzhinov is a 9th dan taekwon-do expert.

Kirsan Ilumzhinov, a businessman and exponent of radical market reforms, emerged as the victor of the first presidential elections in Kalmykiya, a Russian federal republic with one of the lowest standards of living in the former USSR. The man whose personal fortune is estimated in excess of Kalmykiya's annual budget has pledged to carry out reforms along the lines of the South-Korean model.

To all those who manage to break through the powerful shield of bodyguards which surrounds him — a shield made up of Russians, Kalmyks, and Chechens — Mr Ilumzhinov does his utmost to appear friendly and amicable, although it is clear that behind this outward urbaneness, a mask perfected during five years of study at the Moscow Institute of International Relations, lies his true self, a person who knows only too well what he wants and how to achieve it. His face bears the constant smile of a billionaire who attaches little importance to his billions (real or imaginary), which, in any case, he acquired almost by chance — for this reason alone he deserves some sympathy.

delights in telling how he decided to dine in a certain Moscow restaurant and learned only on arrival that he himself was, in fact, the owner. He plans to open restaurants in Seoul and Tokyo as part of a joint project with Petrosyan, the French king of Russian caviar, who served Mr Ilumzhinov his own "home-made" omelette on the Champs Elysées.

Mr Ilumzhinov's current assets include 50 major enterprises specializing in textiles, transport, tourism, publishing, and gaming.

During his pre-election campaign, which was organized along classic Western lines, Mr Ilumzhinov never missed an opportunity to demonstrate his wealth, claiming this as a guarantee against the corruption which usually accompanies less-wealthy candidates' rise to power. His gamble paid off, and two-thirds of the inhabitants of modest Kalmykiya voted in favour of the young entrepreneur, who, for the month leading up to the election, had subsidized production of milk and bread from his own pocket. The voters most likely based their choice on the assumption that any billionaire would be better than a candidate such as General Valery Ochnov, the champion of law and order, who promised to feed the republic with free humanitarian aid by flight to Kalmykiya by military aircraft.

too young; others added that the presidential candidate was far too much like a gangster. Many openly branded him a puppet of the Chechen oil Mafia. His most fierce critics presented "incontrovertible evidence" that the starting capital Mr Ilumzhinov used to set up his business was acquired by dubious means in Afghanistan, before Soviet troops were withdrawn from that country. This accusation was based on what many viewed as an unlikely friendship between Ilumzhinov, the son of a simple Soviet engineer and a veterinary surgeon, and Babrak Karmal and Najibullah, a friendship which goes back to the days when the latter held the position of the last secretary of the Central Committee of the People's Democratic Party of Afghanistan. Moreover, the KGB tried to prove that Ilumzhinov was employed as an Afghan spy while he was a student at the Moscow State Institute of International Relations. Mr Ilumzhinov was expelled from the institute and charged with treason. The charge was later dropped, but even following the collapse of the Soviet Union, many former Soviet citizens, including those who were relatively indifferent to their country, were reluctant to view the rich, young Ilumzhinov as an independent person, suspecting he was little more than the side-kick of some other more important figure. Two-and-a-half years ago, Mr Ilumzhinov's presentation of a report on the activities of his company, Sun, to the academic council of the Moscow State Institute of International Relations raised little more than laughter and ridicule among the professors of economics in attendance. "He made no great impression as a businessman," comments one of the heads of the Institute. "He wore a broad, naïve smile. He seemed too smug about everything; too smug about his wealth."

Nevertheless, the man they made fun of two years ago is taken seriously today. Perhaps he will not be able to withstand competition from American big business or Middle-Eastern oil Sheikhs, but what Mr Ilumzhinov has achieved — 50 firms with an annual turnover of $500 million providing 40,000 jobs — is no mere drop in the ocean for tiny Kalmykiya.

INTERNATIONAL SUPPORT

Scepticism towards the young, nouveau riche businessman lost some of its edge after Mr Ilumzhinov completed a series of talks with the former acting Russian prime minister, Yegor Gaidar, in Spring 1993. Gaidar gave no answer either way to Mr Ilumzhinov's invitation to head the government of Kalmykiya, but he did pledge to support the president's programme of economic reform "in word and in deed". International backing will also ensure Mr Ilumzhinov's initial reforms have a better chance of success. Even before his election, the future president received promises of easy-term credits from South Korea, Japan, Saudi Arabia, and a number of European countries.

Although a number of his pre-election pledges may have been of a very populist nature, promising fairy-tale wealth to the Kalmyk public and a rapid "Kalmyk miracle" to the rest of the world, Mr Ilumzhinov has from the outset made no secret of the fact that he intends to lead his people towards a brilliant future by ruling over them with an iron fist.

"The Kalmyks need a Khan, even one who is elected through democratic processes," says this grandson of one of the red commissars who abolished the remnants of the Kalmyk Khanate some seventy years ago. To begin with, in view of the extreme economic crisis, Mr Ilumzhinov has banned all political parties and movements, all demonstrations, and any other phenomenon which might weaken the young democracy, until such a time as Kalmykiya catches up with Russia and overtakes her standard of living two times over. He has also introduced a six-day working week, decimated the staff of government ministries, replaced the Soviets with his own representatives and, last but certainly not least, achieved the voluntary dissolution of the republican parliament. Mr Ilumzhinov relies on a team of 25 young and energetic ministers: entrepreneurs and lawyers who make up the advisory council to the head of state.

SETTING A PRECEDENT

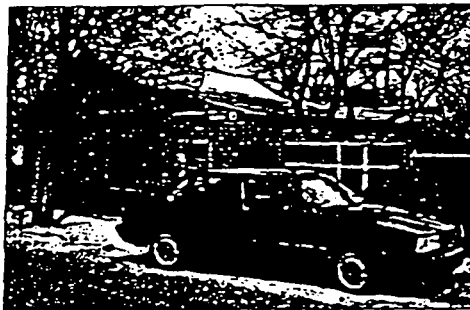

"Using Kalmykiya as an example, I hope to demonstrate how presidential rule could be introduced," says Mr Ilumzhinov, who does not try to conceal his ambition to repeat this experience as the head of a united and indivisible Russia.

Yet Ilumzhinov has no desire to win himself the status of another Pinochet. From dawn till dusk he tours the republic in his luxurious limousine, holding meetings with influential figures and trying to negotiate an amicable solution to problems. The more powerful members of the old guard ask straight out, "What are you going to do with me?" Mr Ilumzhinov always has a number of options ready for each individual case, such as the offer to head a new firm, credits and interest-free loans to start up a business, or a position as a government adviser.

Mr Ilumzhinov is relying on the food-processing industry, oil refining (the republic has some 10 billion tonnes in reserves), and the creation of a banking and finance centre in Elista, to lift the republic out of its current economic crisis. He dreams of creating a Kalmyk market overflowing with fiercely competitive international corporations. In the hope of attracting big business, Mr Ilumzhinov plans to set up an "offshore zone" in Kalmykiya, which will be the first in the Russian Federation, and establish a 3-percent profit tax.

While he shuns the Chechen model of fundamental separatism, Kirsan Ilumzhinov does strive to attain independence from the Centre, and he is prepared to forego subsidies from the federal budget and ensure that the republic is self-financing in order to achieve this.

Proposals for Kalmykiya's independence were submitted to the Russian vice-president responsible for financial issues, Boris Fedorov, just two days after Mr Ilumzhinov was elected president.

A MAN WITH A MISSION

Kirsan Ilumzhinov is only thirty, but he looks even younger. He was born under the zodiacal sign of Aries; people born under this sign are said to be natural leaders. Mr Ilumzhinov sleeps as little as four hours a day. He travels the bumpy roads of Kalmykiya in a 9-metre black Lincoln, accompanied by an entourage of six or seven other foreign-made cars. In Moscow, however, he prefers to make the journey to the government buildings on Staraya Square in a more modest dirt Mercedes 300, without his usual escort of bodyguards.

The maid who cleans Mr Ilumzhinov's room at the Rossia hotel has known him since his days as a peoples' deputy of the Supreme Soviet of the USSR. She praises him highly as "good deputy, tidy, and not in the least violent".

Mr Ilumzhinov recognizes no political guns; but he claims to respect "Yeltsin's decisiveness," "Bush's thoroughness," and "Gaidar's determination". His most respected cultural figure is the Kalmyk poet David Kugultinov, the namesake of his three-year-old son. Mr Ilumzhinov seeks advice from people who, in his own words, he "trusts implicitly". They include Anyom Tarasov, Marc Oppenheimer and Hans Fredrik Samuelsson, chairman of the European Economic Council's committee on multinational companies.

Kirsan Ilumzhinov is proud to be a Kalmyk and can talk for hours on the subject of the Kalmyk people. When, after he was elected president, it was proposed that the monument of Vladimir Lenin in the centre of Elista be removed, Mr Ilumzhinov replied, "No. Let it stay. Lenin had Kalmyk blood in his veins". This national pride does not, however, prevent Ilumzhinov from being a cosmopolitan and he dreams openly of the day when his government will be made up of Kalmyks, Russians, Germans, Jews, Ingush, Chechens, Azerbaijanis, Armenians, Tuvins and Buryats. Neither does the fact that he is a Buddhist prevent him from building new Orthodox cathedrals, and mosques, nor from practising white magic. Before moving to his new residence, Elista's own "White House," he made sure he had a cat for good luck and two tanks of holy water to bless Kalmykiya's future reforms.

Until recently, Mr Ilumzhinov wore a diamond-studded Cartier designer watch worth as much as his Mercedes. Now he has replaced this with a much cheaper make. He is no longer so fond of luxury as he once was. When he started out in business, three years ago, Kirsan Ilumzhinov simply wanted to make money, lots of money. Today, he has set himself a far more difficult task. He would like to change the world; and he plans to start with the little republic which lies in the Kalmyk steppes. ■ answered the basic question: do we want to be Libya or Europe, to re-establish an old-style communist regime or to promote market institutions? Where there are two principal alternatives, you must choose one."

Russia's centrists are led by Alexander Rutskoj, the vice-president, Nikolai Travkin, the leader of the Democratic Party of Russia (the country's best-organised political party), and Andrey Volsky, who leads a lobby that claims to produce 72% of Russia's industrial output. They think market choices are dangerous. What Russia needs, they reckon, is compromise, fudge and slower reform.

Their influence used to be great. In April 1992 they persuaded Boris Yeltsin to put three industrialists into the government to act as a brake on the free-marketiers. Last December they were instrumental in getting rid of Mr Gaidar and replacing him with one of those industrialists.

Since then, they have grown weaker. The centre stands for compromise between president and parliament—and compromise no longer seems a solution to their bitter war. Further, they lack a strong leader. The widening breach between president and vice-president might have solved this problem by freeing Mr Rutskoj to act as their leader. And indeed he has been nominated as the centrists' candidate in the presidential election due in 1996 (but likely to be held earlier). On May 20th, he held a meeting of more than 30 centrist groups to start preparing for elections. But all this meeting succeeded in proving was that the centre is falling apart. Mr Travkin, one of the centre's few leaders with a genuine popular following, refused to attend.

Most serious of all, the centre's backbone—the directors of various state-owned enterprises—has broken in two. The lobby of industrial managers has long been subdivided between reformers and conservatives.

Under Mikhail Gorbachev, Mr Volsky counted as the leader of its reformist wing. Whereas the leader of the conservatives was one of those who staged the attempted coup of 1991. That group, now represented by Yuri Cokht's Industrial Union, has broken with Mr Volsky's lobby, ignoring calls for compromise at recent sessions of parliament and voting against Mr Yeltsin at every opportunity. Its members reckon their enterprises have no future without price controls and government subsidies.

On the other side are the managers of enterprises who think they have a commercial future. "They don't see themselves as old-style state directors," says Mr Gaidar. "They understand that subsidised credits and inflation are not a solution but a problem." This group's main interests are that privatisation should be speeded up and that privatised companies should have the same rights as state-owned rivals.

The pro-reform directors are now organising to defend these interests. The first get-together of private business was held last November. In March representatives of more than 1,000 private firms decided to set up the Association of Private and Privatised Business, which they have invited Mr Gaidar to run. Two other lobbies for reform have come into being, the Entrepreneurial Policy Initiative and the Inter-regional Trade and Banking Union. Their leader, Konstantin Zatulyn, says their members are not content with playing the role of "donors to well-known politicians with unclear political goals". The fudge at the centre is plainly melting.

A foreign-aid opportunity

FROM OUR MOSCOW CORRESPONDENT

KALMYKIA is a semi-autonomous republic of the Russian federation with a population of 320,000, no trees, a universal drink of tea mingled with mutton fat, and a 30-year-old Buddhist president who claims to control 50 companies with a combined turnover of $500m a year. It is also the source of an idea that could save Russia.

While Boris Yeltsin has struggled to control the Russian parliament for a year, Kalmykia's 30-year-old president, Kirsan Ilyumzhinov, has solved a local version of the same problem in a day. On April 30th he persuaded the Kalmyk parliament to adopt three bills. One created a presidential republic. One abolished all local councils. The third reduced the republic's parliament from 130 to 25. This rump has been ordered to draft a new electoral law within two months so that new elections can be held.

Mr Ilyumzhinov's technique for getting rid of parliament was simple. He bribed it. The parties in Kalmykia were offered interest-free loans on condition that they abandoned politics and went into business. All except the Communists have accepted. The Democratic Party has turned itself into a "small enterprise".

In Russia itself, parliamentary deputies hinted that they might be open to a spot of bribery when, earlier this year, they discussed a bill to guarantee them various privileges for life—a flat in Moscow, a salary, priority booking on aircraft and trains. Sergei Yushenkov, a leading democrat in the Russian parliament, guesses that, for less than $10m, you could bribe enough deputies to resign, making it impossible for parliament to form a quorum and thus forcing a general election: a small price to pay for removing a big obstacle to reform.

THE PHILADELPHIA INQUIRY

He's an unabashed capitalist with revolutionary plans.

A Russian republic has new and very ambitious leader

By Stephen Bepler
INQUIRY STAFF WRITER

ELISTA, Russia — Change was in the air here last week as the first ever elected president of Kalmykia, one of 21 independent republics within Russia, got down to the business of remodeling "the mentality of the people," restructuring the government and converting this poor, rural region where sheep outnumber people by about 8 to 1 into a bastion of wide-open capitalism, complete with off-shore zones and Swiss banks.

At least, that was the program that got Kiran Ilumzhinov elected last month with 45 percent of the vote, and he seems not the least bit shy about taking power and moving on it. "This president," he emphasizes, "is not a democrat and not a communist. He is a capitalist."

And he's begun to bring international attention to Kalmykia, a rural republic on the Caspian Sea with 220,000 people, about 45 percent of whom are Asian Kalmyks, and 27 percent Russian.

Ilumzhinov is 30 years old, as thin as most campaign promises, and as confident as anyone his age would be who claims to be a billionaire in rubles and a millionaire in dollars. "I don't have time to count it," he said, evading, as he always does, a direct answer to the question of how much he's worth.

He's also got all that forthcoming when asked where he made his money, or how he will achieve some of his campaign pledges, such as the one about giving every family in the republic $100.

But he's been very direct on some matters of policy, and he's already made changes in government organization that go far beyond anything done elsewhere to break down old communist structures.

He promised during the campaign that the 130-member Supreme Soviet of Kalmykia would be disbanded and replaced by a streamlined 25-member parliament.

This had great symbolic impact in a country where one of the endearing communist slogans was "All Power to Soviet," and Boris N. Yeltsin is having so much trouble extricating himself from a continuing political wrestling match with the national Supreme Soviet.

To sweeten his proposal, Ilumzhinov, forever the realist, said he understood that the deputies "won't go away just like that." So he offered them loans with low rates "so they could do some business."

And a week ago, the Soviet quietly

The Prospering President

...uality seems to be blossoming around the young president.

Walk into a restaurant and there are two pictures of Ilumzhinov, baby-faced with long slick black hair, check into the hotel and there's a calendar with his picture bolting the cashier.

A pale, green banner stretched across the "Alley of Flowers," a park walkway, reads "Long Live the First President of Kalmykia," and another hanging across from Lenin Square, which Ilumzhinov can see from his office, declares: "With you President of Kalmykia, Our Thoughts, Aspirations and Hopes."

Ilumzhinov, for a man of his reported wealth, lives in the same dirt-street bungalow in which he was born. He lives there with his parents, his wife and 3-year-old son.

"I prefer this house," he said during an interview there, over a lunch of meat, potatoes and caviar prepared and served skilfully by his wife and mother.

From that house, Ilumzhinov went to the highly prestigious Moscow International Affairs Institute and then, when he graduated in 1989, he says he was hired as manager of a joint Japanese-Russian firm because he did well on a test.

From there, he says, he expanded into publishing, construction, banking, casinos and a paper commodity exchange that he started. One member of parliament has charged some of Ilumzhinov's money has actually come through illegal oil deals, but the president denies it and the deputy has not been very detailed.

"I worked with my head," Ilumzhinov said. "If everything was taken away from me, in a year I'd be worth the Soviet parliament, said that he advised his protégé first to go into business, and then into politics. "He realized that to change business to a market economy you should go into politics, to create a way of life that would change the mentality."

Changing people's mentality is something that Ilumzhinov speaks of often.

"The main thing," he said, "is to end the parasitical mentality of people." He has said that as head of the republic, he will no longer accept subsidies from the central government, which now make up 85 percent of Kalmykia's budget.

The republic, he said, "will be independent. We have to earn money, the old-fashioned way." But again he's been a little inconsistent. At one time he says the republic will not take subsidies, at another that money from Moscow will be accounted for and repaid as the republic prospers.

That prosperity will come in two ways, he says. The state itself will become a corporation, earning money and encouraging others to start businesses, and by attracting outside investment with low taxes, perhaps even an off-shore zone.

"I want to make this a tax haven," he said. And "I want the Swiss to open up a banking center" to train personnel and help make Kalmykia a banking mecca in Russia.

That Ilumzhinov is even given a chance to achieve his goals is an indication of how unsettled Russia is. He is essentially proposing a separate economic system for his republic, and no one from the central government is arguing.

In fact, says Ilumzhinov, Yeltsin's response has been to say, "Thank God, now we have one republic less that wants money."

Unquestionably, there are opportunities here for investment. The region has oil, natural gas, other minerals, fish and, as Ilumzhinov likes to say, so many sheep "that 50 percent of all suits made in Russia are made with Kalmykian wool."

What are needed are plants to process the raw materials, rather than just extract them for manufacturing elsewhere.

Life has never been easy for the Kalmykians. They were a nomadic people who settled in Russia in the 16th and 17th centuries. In 1943, Stalin exiled them all to camps in Siberia or the Urals as essentially slave labor during the war. Not until 1953, under Khrushchev, did they return. Today, they are poor, with the aver-

LONGS THE NEWS TALKS

At least, that was the program that got Kiran Ilumzhinov elected last month with 65 percent of the vote, and he seems not the least bit shy about taking power and moving on it. "This president," he emphasizes, "is not a democrat and not a communist. He is a capitalist."

And he's begun to bring international attention to Kalmykia, a rural republic on the Caspian Sea with 320,000 people, about 45 percent of whom are Asian Kalmyks, and 57 percent Russian.

Ilumzhinov is 20 years old, as thin as a reed, with long, straight, black hair, and as confident as anyone his age would be who claims to be a billionaire in rubles and a millionaire in dollars. "I don't have time to count it," he said, evading, as he always does, a direct answer to the question of how much he's worth.

He's also not all that forthcoming when asked where he made his money, or how he will achieve some of his campaign pledges, such as the one about giving every family in the republic $100.

But he's been very direct on some questions of policy, and he's already made changes in government organization that go far beyond anything done elsewhere to break down old communist structures.

He promised during the campaign that the 130-member Supreme Soviet of Kalmykia would be disbanded and replaced by a streamlined 25-member parliament.

This had great symbolic impact in a country where one of the enduring communist slogans was "All Power to Soviet," and Boris N. Yeltsin is having so much trouble extricating himself from a continuing political wrestling match with the national Supreme Soviet.

To sweeten his proposal, Ilumzhinov, forever the realist, said he understood that the deputies "won't go away just like that." So he offered them loans with low rates "so they could do some business."

And a week ago, the Soviet quietly voted itself out of business. "Ilumzhinov said he'd make profound change if he won," explained Ilya Bugdov, the former chairman of the Supreme Soviet, who was cleaning out his desk here last Wednesday, the day before giving up his office to the new head of the parliament.

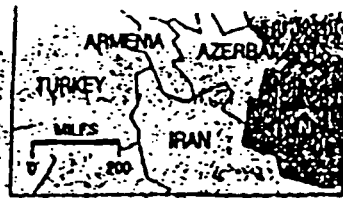

"People elected him. So how could we resist his program? The people will not understand." Thus far, according to Ilumzhinov, none of the deputies has asked for a loan.

The parliament, made up of members of the old Soviet, is supposed to take two months to write a constitution and disband. Then a new parliament is to be elected.

But Ilumzhinov makes clear he expects no opposition from either body, or anyone else. "There should always be one master," he said. Kalmykians "put their trust in me and they shouldn't interfere."

And what if opposition develops? "There should be no opposition," he said. "I'm liquidating the basis for it."

In the city of Elista, the Kalmykian capital 625 miles south of Moscow, a town of 91,000 people, few stores and many dirt roads, a new cult of personality seems to be blossoming around the young president.

Walk into a restaurant and there are two pictures of Ilumzhinov, baby-faced with long, thick, black hair; check into the hotel and there's a calendar with his picture behind the cashier.

A pale-green banner stretched across the "Alley of Heroes," a park walkway, reads "Long Live the First President of Kalmykia," and another hanging across from Lenin Square, which Ilumzhinov can see from his office, declares: "With you President of Kalmykia, Our Thoughts, Aspirations and Hopes."

Ilumzhinov, for a man of his reported wealth, lives in the same dirt-street bungalow in which he was born. He lives there with his parents, his wife and 3-year-old son.

"I prefer this house," he said during an interview there over a lunch of meat, potatoes and caviar prepared and served silently by his wife and mother.

From that house, Ilumzhinov went to the highly prestigious Moscow International Affairs Institute, and then, when he graduated in 1989, he says, he was hired as manager of a joint Japanese-Russian firm because he did well on a test.

From there, he says, he expanded into publishing, construction, banking, casinos and a paper commodity exchange that he started. One member of parliament has charged some of Ilumzhinov's money has actually come through illegal oil scams, but the president denies it and the deputy has not been very detailed.

"I worked with my head," Ilumzhinov said. "If everything was taken away from me, in a year I'd be worth a billion again."

The president can be given to exaggeration, and one of his exaggerations was his promise to give every family of the republic $100 if he was elected. Now he says he will provide money mostly to young people to begin businesses.

"I chose to see young people organize in groups and start little businesses," he said, adding that he has already given 50 million rubles for young entrepreneurs to start bakeries, small meat-processing plants, even discos.

But others, said by Ilumzhinov to be most familiar with the program, said he actually provided clothing, some of which was distributed to poor people, and some given to young people to sell. No other businesses have been started, they said.

Anyway, it seems not to matter in most people here. "We just believe he can create a good agriculture processing center here," said Valery Badmayev, 40, a meat salesman. "And he wants to open a branch of a Swiss bank here. That's positive."

Ilumzhinov's mentor, David Kugul-dinov, a fellow Elistian, widely known Russian poet and former member of subsidies from the central government, which now make up 85 percent of Kalmykia's budget.

The republic, he said, "will be independent. We have to earn money, the old-fashioned way." But again he's been a little inconsistent. At one time he says the republic will not take subsidies; at another that money from Moscow will be accounted for and repaid as the republic prospers.

That prosperity will come in two ways, he says. The state itself will become a corporation, earning money and encouraging others to start businesses, and by attracting outside investment with low taxes, perhaps even an offshore zone.

"I want to make this a tax haven," he said. And "I want the Swedes to open up a banking center" to train people and help make Kalmykia a banking mecca in Russia.

That Ilumzhinov is even given a chance to achieve his goals is an indication of how unopposed Rueda is. He is essentially proposing a corporate economic system for his republic, and so one from the central government is arguing.

In fact, says Ilumzhinov, Yeltsin's response has been to say, "Thank God, now we have one republic less that wants money."

Unquestionably, there are opportunities here for investment. The region has oil, natural gas, other minerals, fish and, as Ilumzhinov likes to say, so many sheep "that 50 percent of all suits made in Russia are made with Kalmykian wool."

What are needed are plants to process the raw materials, rather than just extract them for manufacturing elsewhere.

Life has never been easy for the Kalmykians. They were a nomadic people who settled in Russia in the 16th and 17th centuries. In 1943, Stalin exiled them all to camps in Siberia or the Urals as essentially slave labor during the war. Not until 1952, under Khrushchev, did they return. Today, they are poor, with the average salary somewhere between 12,000 and 15,000 rubles a month, the equivalent of about $20.

And now this new experiment is coming at them, and they are a little in awe of it all. "Do you know what deep changes that man wants to make in our lives?" asked Bugdov, the former head of the Soviet.

Interviews around town suggest that most people agree with Galina Kabakova, 50, who was walking two blocks from the main street with the four cows she owns.

"It's new," she said of the president. "We can't imagine what it will all look like. We haven't had time to restructure it all. We're used to one system — socialism. Capitalism is alien to us."

Then she pointed to the four cows she owns, mentioned that she sometimes sells some of the milk they produce, and said, "We're starting to work in the new way."

INFORMATION ON MINERAL RESOURCES GIVEN TO THE UN REPRESENTATIVES on the 6th of June, 1993

1. The main mineral resource of Republic Kalmykia is hydrocarbonate crude oil, gas and gasocondensate. The prognosis in the amount of resources is 1463 mln.t. of conditional fuel, including liquids (oil and condensate) - 211 mln.t.

1000 cubic metres of gas = 1 ton of conditional fuel. But these figures have to be surveyed, i.e. to be changed from proposed figures into industrial ones.

The percentage of prospected initial summarised oil resources is estimated as 9.5%. The percentage of initial summarised gas resources is 1.2%. The territory of the most exploration and prospect is a geological structure Karpinsky Kryazh (mountain-range) Iki-Burulsky, Chernosemelsky, Kaspiysky districts, where nowadays there are 18 oil and 7 gas fields being explored, and the remaining extractable supplies of industrial categories are: oil - 10,6 mln.t., gas - 11,082 mln.cubic meters. Under the existing level of the oil withdrawal 500 thousand of the supplies mentioned will last for 20 years, and gas - for 50 years.

The large-scale economical changes, stated in the programme of the President of Republic Kalmykia, are likely to promote the oil industry enterprises to improve research and survey of oil and gas in the most promising Northern parts of the republic, where there are possibilities of finding medium-sized and big oil and gas deposits, situated on the essential depth (4,5-6 ka), which differentiates them from the Southern areas, where the deposits are situated on the depths 2-3 ka, but they are shallow, with average figure of 1 mln.t. per one deposit.

So, the main potential supplies of hydrocarbonate crude in the republic have not been surveyed or explored, and the existing deposits also, were not subject to the final exploration.

2. In Sarpinsky district the nitric gas deposit was opened (nitrogen - 86,782) with the estimated supplies of 6 mln.cubic meters, which can be used as the raw material for ammonia production and nitric fertilizers. The assessment shows that if only one already existing well will be used with gas flow 6 thousand cubic meters per day, the annual output of ammonia will be 28 thousand tons.

3. In Meloderbetovskiy and Sarpinsky districts the existence of bishofite layers has been opened with the capacity of 87 m. The area of their location is estimated in 350 square km with essential amounts. On the basis of bishofite fields it is possible to open a chemical complex to produce bromine, metallic magnesium, magnesium oxide for metallurgy needs.

For economy bishofite is a good explosive, the base for magnesic raw materials stimulates the increase of meat, milk, eggs quality. In medicine it is very good for professional illnesses prophylaxis in ecologically bad areas, when filling teeth, burns and wounds treating etc.

4. More than 30 deposits of construction structural materials raw materials for bricks, ceramics, clay gypsum, glass and structural sand have been explored and ready for use.

The surveyed supplies of shell-stone are about 40 mln. cubic meters.

5. 35 fresh water wells have been opened. But on the territory of the republic practically there are no the wells with good conditions and supplies, even in the prognosis. All the wells with fresh water are shallow and are used mostly for water supply of villages, settlements and district centres, they are not able to satisfy the needs of towns and Elista. Besides, the mineralisation level is rather high, in many cases higher than given in the State Standard figure "Fresh drinking water".

6. There is a number of promising places concerning the supplies of mineral, balneological and thermal waters with bromine and iodine.

The most part of them are not surveyed because there has been no demand for it.

The Chairman of "Geolcon"

T. S. Gudimov.

The total figures of production and processing of sturgeon in Kalmykia

1.1. The harvest of sturgeon and caviar output.

Year Amount of caught fish, t/caviar output, kg of fishing

Year	Amount of caught fish, t	caviar output, kg	Way of fishing
1981	147	5,2	4 seines
1982	90	5,7	3
1983	89	7,0	3
1984	118	9,3	2
1985	34	2,0	1
1986	27	1,4	1
1987	33	2,7	1
1988	41	4,0	1
1989	191	1,0	fishnet
1990	200	1,0	fishnet
1991	200	0,9	fishnet
1992	209	9,0	fishnet

For 1993 the sturgeon fish quote is 160 tons, planned caviar output - 5,0 tons.

1.2. In order to reproduce sturgeons in the Caspian Sea 13 federal fish-factories have been established, they are situated on the Volga, Kuma and Terek. All this artificial reproduction system allows to have an annual average amount of about 100 mln. of baby-fish in the Caspian Sea.

Using this quantity of artificially reproduced fish about 56% of beluga, 27% of Russian sturgeon, 33% of sevryuga supplies are formed. Besides, taking into consideration the fact that biological capacity of the Caspian Sea concerning the amount of baby-fish of sturgeons is 2 times higher than the today's potential of fish-factories, there's a possibility to extend their network, bringing foreign investments here, which will allow to increase the quote for Kalmykia (the sturgeons harvest). At the time present in Republic Kalmykia it is necessary to construct and start a fish-factory specialized in sturgeons reproduction.

1.3. On the Caspian fish-factory it is necessary to install a foreign machinery line to produce caviar, there is a lot of space at the factory to be used for the installation and the line to produce various fish products (smoked sturgeon, e.g.) is needed alongside with large freezers.

2. Cattle products processing in Kalmykia 1990-1992.

Dear Mr. Pickering:

The Department of Energy encourages the partnering of energy-related major companies with minority business enterprises, as a way of leveraging resources, which will result in economic growth in our communities. Joint ventures of this nature support our mission to devise and lead diversity strategies that will create full partnerships for small and historically underutilized business enterprises.

The Entrepreneurs Networking to Realize Economic Power (ENTREP) is an organization that holds monthly meetings to network, present business opportunities, and discuss ways to overcome obstacles encountered in obtaining contracts. At their upcoming November 4, 1993 meeting, Mrs. Corlis Moody, Director Designee of the Department of Energy's Office of Economic Impact and Diversity, will be the guest speaker, representing Secretary Hazel O'Leary.

The Department of Energy would like to encourage you or a representative to attend this breakfast meeting and to join other businesses as they unite to develop strategies that will be mutually beneficial, as well as serving as a means to boost the Nation's economy.

The meeting will be held at 7:00 a.m. at the Norris Restaurant, 2491 South Braeswood (Kirby & Braeswood), in Houston, Texas. Please contact Mr. Michael F. Harness at (713) 266-0290 by October 29 if you plan to attend.

The Department of Energy encourages the partnering of energy-related major companies with minority business enterprises, as a way of leveraging resources, which will result in economic growth in our communities. Joint ventures of this nature support our mission to devise and lead diversity strategies that will create full partnerships for small and historically underutilized business enterprises.

The Entrepreneurs Networking to Realize Economic Power (ENTREP) is an organization that holds monthly meetings to network, present business opportunities, and discuss ways to overcome obstacles encountered in obtaining contracts. At their upcoming November 4, 1993 meeting, Mrs. Corlis Moody, Director Designee of the Department of Energy's Office of Economic Impact and Diversity, will be the guest speaker, representing Secretary Hazel O'Leary.

The Department of Energy would like to encourage you or a representative to attend this breakfast meeting and to join other businesses as they unite to develop strategies that will be mutually beneficial, as well as serving as a means to boost the Nation's economy.

The meeting will be held at 7:00 a.m. at the Norris Restaurant, 2491 South Braeswood (Kirby & Braeswood), in Houston, Texas. Please contact Mr. Michael F. Harness at (713) 266-0290 by October 29 if you plan to attend.

Sincerely,

Bill White

Dear Mr. Murphy:

On December 9, 1993, the Department of Energy will publicly release the Domestic Natural Gas and Oil Initiative. Prior to Secretary O'Leary's press conference to announce the Initiative, we will be hosting a reception for individuals who participated in our initial Stakeholder meetings convened throughout the summer and into the fall. I hope you will plan to attend the reception and the press conference.

The reception will be held on December 9, 1993, at 12:45 p.m. in Room 1E-245 at the U.S. Department of Energy, Forrestal Building, 1000 Independence Ave., SW, Washington, D.C. The press conference will be at 1:30 p.m. in the Department of Energy auditorium.

If you need any additional information, please have your staff contact Melissa Tell at (202) 586-5667. I look forward to seeing you next week.

Sincerely,

Bill White

Dear Joseph:

Thank you for the speech. I am always interested in any input that may give me some guidance as to where to lead the Department of Energy. Please continue to advise me on how the Department can better serve our country.

Sincerely,

Bill White
